PRELIMINARY NOTE TO THE ORIGINAL EDITION.

THE first eleven pedigrees in this book have been chiefly compiled from documents, copies of which follow each. Where no authority is given, the statements have been either taken from the Turner pedigrees, by Dawson Turner and T. W. King, late York Herald, or have been obtained from private sources. This applies particularly to the later generations. The twelfth pedigree is given on the authority of Sir Charles George Young, late Garter King at Arms.

In a book entirely composed of names and dates, some errors in copying or printing are almost inevitable, and, notwithstanding the greatest pains, it is too much to hope that these will be entirely absent.

I take this opportunity of thanking the many friends whose aid has enabled me to bring my work to something like a conclusion; in particular my thanks are due to Mr T. M. Baker, Town Clerk of Great Yarmouth, who gave me access to the municipal records; to Mr. Frederic Johnson, of the same town, who supplied the Mulbarton Registers and Norwich Wills; to Mr. G. G. Baker Cresswell, to whom I owe the twelfth pedigree; to my cousin, Cecil Turner, and my brother, Archer Turner, both of whom have made many searches, and furnished much information.

PREFACE.

It is felt that some explanation should be given of the circumstances which have led to the publication of a new edition of this book. It was about the year 1893 that I first met the Rev. Harward Turner, who was then considering the question of printing certain notes he had made about his family. After some deliberation it was decided to consult Wills, Parish Registers, &c., in Norfolk, and he requested me to undertake this: the ultimate result was that the "Collection and Notes of the Turner Family" appeared in the early part of 1895. An acquaintance thus began, in the first instance, as a mere matter of business, developed in time into, as I believe, a very real and sincere friendship on both sides; and since the publication of the book in that year, a constant correspondence was kept up between us, and we exchanged notes upon genealogical matters regularly. He frequently discussed with me the issue of a future edition, corrected and revised as far as possible; and it was always his intention to do this, when he considered the time had arrived for it. It was in May, 1905, that Dr. Turner came to Yarmouth to see me, and then it was, at his urgent request, that I agreed to undertake the preparation of a new edition, in case he should not live to do it himself, which at that time seemed an unlikely contingency. In January of the present year Dr. Turner again paid me a visit at Yarmouth—for which town he had a great liking—"No where do I feel so much at home, as I do in Yarmouth," he said in a letter to me; he was not looking in the best of health then, but as he had only recently rather hurriedly left Russia, and had not definitely decided where to live, I attributed his lack of spirits to the worries and fatigues consequent on his removal.

Little did I think when I left my dear friend at the Yarmouth Station on the morning of the 15th of January, that I should never see him again, or that I should so soon be called upon to carry out his wishes. It was only a week or so after, that I heard with very real sorrow and surprise of his unexpected death, at Paris, on January 23rd. The present book is an honest endeavour to carry out Dr.

Turner's wishes. A certain amount of material both he and I had accumulated, but I do not think he anticipated that he would himself so soon be removed from his earthly labours, thus necessitating a new edition being brought out much sooner than it would otherwise have been. A good deal has been done in the way of bringing the matter in the book up to date—no doubt, more might have been done in other ways, but it was considered desirable, for several reasons, that the publication should not be too long delayed. It is hoped that the large and interesting series of portraits in the book will to some extent compensate for deficiencies in other directions, of which I am but too conscious.

To the many members of the family who have readily and in the kindest way replied to my requests for information, I tender my grateful acknowledgments; especially am I indebted to Dr. Turner's sister, Mrs. C. J. Turner, for most valued help, much kind encouragement, and ever willing assistance in very many ways. To the owners of the various portraits I would also express my thanks for permitting me to have them reproduced in this book; particularly to Mr. R. H. I. Palgrave, F.R.S., for the interesting series of early portraits, and for the loan of the beautiful copper plates, etched by his grandmother, Mrs. Dawson Turner. Mr. F. O. Fisher most kindly wrote the memoir of his friend, Bishop Turner, and also presented three plates of his family. From Sir Joseph D. Hooker, G.C.S.I., I have received much help, especially in the preparation of the list of portraits. To the President and Council of the Linnæan Society I am indebted for permission to reproduce Sir Joseph Hooker's portrait in their possession, and to Mr. John Murray also for the use of the plate of Bishop Jacobson's portrait. The biographical notices are founded upon the published memoirs in the Dictionary of National Biography, by the kind permission of Messrs. Smith, Elder, & Co., the Palgrave Memorials, and various newspapers and journals which have been consulted for that purpose, and to their respective editors I am indebted for leave to reprint them. The quotation from Lord Rosebery's "Life of Pitt" is inserted by permission of Messrs. Macmillan and Co.

Note.—For upwards of three centuries the Turner family have been proprietors of lands in Keningham and Mulbarton, and the descendants of William Turner, who died in 1547, are still represented there by John Turner Hotblack and George Snelling Hotblack, the former of whom is the present (1906) owner of most of the ancient family estate, which was sold by Mr. John Turner (1784-1875) in 1861 to Mr. James Muskett, of Surlingham, and from whose executor Mr. John Turner Hotblack purchased it in 1886. Mr. G. S. Hotblack, the owner of other parts of the estate, succeeded to the same under the will of Mr. James Turner, of Mulbarton, who died in 1889.

The old house was, it is believed, not pulled down * (as stated by Dawson Turner in his "Sepulchral Reminiscences," p. 90, note), but a new front with rooms on each side of a central hall, was built on to the old house, much of which still remains, and is apparently of the time of Queen Elizabeth or even earlier. In a pasture on the opposite side of the road to the present house, there was anciently another house, which by some of the family is said to have been the original house—but a local antiquary is of opinion it was the old Rectory.

A tablet of white Sicilian marble, mounted on a background of polished black marble, and surmounted by the family crest and arms, has recently been placed in the chancel of Mulbarton Church, by Mr. George Snelling Hotblack, of Shiels Court, Brundall, Norfolk. It records the deaths of members of the Turner family from William Turner, who died in 1547, to Mr. James Turner, a former Churchwarden there, who died November 4th, 1889.

Note.—The Mulbarton Parish Registers contain, besides the extracts given above, the following notices of Turners who have not been identified in any of the preceding pedigrees.

NOTE.—Thomas Godfrey, Mrs. Francis Turner's father, married Elizabeth, second daughter and co-heir of Major Thomas Wilde, of Lowestoft. From the pedigree on the opposite page, it will be seen that Major Thomas Wilde's descendants are now represented by the families of Godfrey and Ferrier. Representatives of the family of Richard Ferrier are still (1906) living in Great Yarmouth.

Representatives of Thomas Godfrey's family now (1906) exist only in the female line: they are (1) the descendants of Samuel Wakeman and Judith Godfrey, now represented by the descendants of John Onley, whose daughter Judith married Mr. Robert Harvey, banker, Norwich; and (2) the descendants of Francis Turner, the Town Clerk of Yarmouth (the founder of the Yarmouth branch of the family of Turner of Mulbarton), of whom there are now (1906) numerous representatives in the male line. Hence it appears that

The situation of town-clerk, held by this my great grandfather (Francis Turner), causes his name to appear on the annals of Yarmouth (see Swinden, pp. 929, 931,) in 1718, when the long standing disputes touching the last of red herrings, which the Corporation had bound themselves in 1352 to deliver yearly forever to the College of Windsor, were finally terminated by the compromise of an annual payment of £10. My ancestor was originally of Kenningham, formerly a separate parish, but made a hamlet of Mulbarton in 1452. Blomefield, in his History of Norfolk, V., p. 74, second edition, states that "Mr Turner bought the manor and demesne there in 1570, of Sir Thomas Gresham;" and he adds, "in this family they still continue." So likewise they do at the present time; the property consisting of about five hundred acres, has neither been added to nor diminished; nor have the proprietors changed their station in life, that of Franklins. Their arms, carved, not of late years upon their pew in the Church, seem to denote them of respectability. The old family house was taken down by the late possessor, who erected in its place the present one, a plain, square, red-bricked, blue-tiled building, with a door in the centre and a window on each side of it, and three windows above. My great grandfather was most probably brought to Yarmouth, and obtained the town clerkship, in consequence of his marriage with the daughter of Mr. Thomas Godfrey, his predecessor, but not immediately so, in the office.

Note:—

As to Arms.

The arms carved on the pew in Mulbarton Church, above alluded to, were Ermine, on a cross quarter pierced four millronds, and the crest a lion passant holding a millrond. These are really the arms of Turnor of Little Wratting, co. Suffolk. They were removed some years ago, and are now in the possession of George Snelling Hotblack, Esq., of Brundall. From the character of the carving it seems probable they were carved about the end of the eighteenth century and the late Mr. James Turner, of Kenningham, used to say they were the work of a member of the family, who, about that period, was apprenticed to a cabinet-maker, and who carved them because they "took his fancy" during a holiday at home. In the British Museum is a copy of a letter written by Mr. Dawson Turner, in 1840, to Dr. Jermyn, in reply to some inquiry about his ancestry and arms, and in this he says "the arms we use are those of Turner of Warham but I believe we have no right to them, and they were only assumed by my grandfather or great grandfather because he had no others."

BACK OF THE OLD TURNER FAMILY PEW, MULBARTON CHURCH, 1842.

These arms are emblazoned in different tinctures, and different charges have been added by various members of the family. Some branches have registered these arms at the College of Arms of late years, with such differences as the laws of Arms require.

The annexed illustration of the old family seat in Mulbarton Church, is from a drawing by Miss M. A. Turner, made in 1842, and now in Mr. Dawson Turner's illustrated copy of Blomefield's "History of Norfolk," in the British Museum.

For Mr. Francis Turner town clerk to the worshipful the mayor and Corporation of Great Yarmouth.

SIR,

In answer to yours of the twenty-seventh of January, at present there are but few of our canons here, but within a fortnight's time more will be at our college; and though the dean and canons (as is plain from the grant of your corporate and the several confirmations of it) are intitled to a last of good and well dryed red herrings, yet since it is a trouble both to them and your corporation, they are willing (if they can safely) to comply with your proposal of an annual payment for the said last, and desire to know what your corporation judge to be a just equivalent for the said yearly last of herrings due to them; which when known, as soon as more of the chapter are here (which will be in the time above mentioned) they will take it into their consideration, and return you an answer to the same. I desire the favour of an answer, with what speed conveniently you can.

I am, Sir,

Your humble servant,

JOHN SEWELL.

To Mr. Francis Turner at (or the Corporation of) Yarmouth;
with care

Windsor Castle, 28th July, 1718.

SIR,

Yours of the 17th came luckily to me at Vpminster, the day before I came hither, which has enabled me to consult my brethren here present, although they are but three besides my self. Also as I came through London, I consulted other principal fishmongers, that deal in your parts for red herrings, proposing your very question to them. They all told me that a barrel of herrings, neither the very best, nor the worst, but such as are marchantable, stand them in 20*s.* at your town, and sometimes more, never less. As to what you intimate about barrels, surprised me and my brethren, because our grant, is not such a tale of herrings, but unam lastam, which every body knows to be 12 barrels, and no doubt but we have the same right to have our herrings put up in barrels, and so delivered at Yarmouth, as to have good well cleansed herrings, yea any herrings at all. But my brethren here are of opinion that we are intitled to the most select and choicest herrings, by reason it was a mulct upon your corporation &c but be the case as it will, to ease you and ourselves of further trouble, our body shall take ten pounds as I offered, although the present canons think I have undercharged you, but they must acquiesce, and will do so, the chapter having delegated their power to me, and I hope your corporation will do so also and save me the trouble of a journey, which will be tedious to me; especially considering that the corporation ought not, and I suppose doth not propose any other advantage to themselves (by giving us money instead of herrings) than to be eased of trouble. If my proposal be not complied with, but I am put to the expence and trouble of a journey, you may be assured that I shall not think myself bound to my proposals, but shall expect what advantage I can make of my enquiries. I shall return (God willing) to Vpminster this week, and desire the favour of your answer to find me there with all speed; because if I come, I would willingly meet my friend Mr Justice Eyn, at Norwich assizes, as he hath desired me to do, and come with him to your town, as he proposeth.

REV. FRANCIS TURNER, M.A.

I am, with all due respect,
Your Corporation's,
And Sir your humble servant,
WILLIAM DERHAM.

I do not doubt but you have memorials of our grants of your herrings; the repeated confirmations of them, the tryals at law about them, and sentence constantly past in our favour, letters from your corporation, acknowledging our right and promising all we demanded &c. If I thought you had not I would bring copies with me, if I come, being willing to treat with you, with all civility and Integrity.

DAWSON TURNER, "SEPULCHRAL REMINISCENCES," PAGE 91, NOTE.

"My grandfather held the office of Minister of St George's Chapel for the long space of forty-nine years, and finally resigned it, together with his life, in consequence of falling down into the cellar of the house lately occupied by Mr Francis Riddell Reynolds, but then by his son, the Rev. Richard Turner. He was likewise for some time master of the Grammar School of the town, which ceased to exist when he retired from the direction of it. It occupied, according to Tanner, a portion of the lodgings and chapel of St Mary's Hospital, founded by Thomas Fastolf in the reign of Edward I.; while another portion of the building formed what Corbridge calls the Corporation House for the Lecturer, in which my grandfather resided. He printed, at the request of the Corporation, 'A Sermon preached by him at St Nicholas' Church, Octr 9th 1746,* being the day appointed by His Majesty for a General Thanksgiving for the Suppression of the late unnatural Rebellion,' and I have been told by the late Mr Blofeld of Hoveton, who knew him well, that Dr Gooch, then Bishop of Norwich, in acknowledging the receipt of a copy, said it was a for lawn one. Lawn, however, or any other preferment he never got. He left four sons, Francis, a surgeon, who has already been mentioned as having taught Sir Astley Cooper, the elements of the science, and who inherited from the Fullers' the manor and estate of Fritton, where he is buried; James, my father, Mayor of Yarmouth in 1779, and first founder of Messrs. Gurneys' Bank here; the Rev. Joseph, D.D., who was senior wrangler of his year, and was Master of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, and Dean of Norwich, a man much honoured by the personal friendship of Mr Pitt; and the Rev. Richard Turner, the subject of the following note."

MRS. FRANCIS TURNER, 1718–1795.

Note.—Palmer (Perlustration of Great Yarmouth, II., p. 174) says that the Rev. Francis Turner's "last sermon at St George's Chapel was on the 31st of January, 1790, when he took for his text, 'It is appointed unto all men once to die.' Three days after he accidentally fell into the cellar of a house in King Street (No 51) then occupied by his son, the Rev. Richard Turner, the door of which had been left open, and broke his leg, from the effects of which he died in two days, aged 73." Mr Palmer adds that an elegy on his death was soon after published in the Norfolk Chronicle, from which he quotes the following lines:—

"Come, then, ye mourners, and deplore his death,
He trod the paths of virtue whilst on earth,
And as he liv'd a pattern to mankind
His loss is felt by those he left behind."

The Manor of Fritton, Suffolk.

(From Suckling's "Suffolk," Vol. I., p. 354, Article Fritton.)

"In 1710 Sir Richard Allin's trustees by Act of Parliament held the Manor of Fritton, and conveyed it to Samuel Fuller Esqre Richard Fuller Esqre M.P. for Yarmouth, devised this Manor and estates to Rev. Joseph Turner, Dean of Norwich for life—remainder to Rev. Richard Turner perpetual curate of Yarmouth for life—remainder to Rev. Francis Turner.

"Mr Francis Turner, surgeon, during the lifetime of the Rev. Francis Turner, purchased the life interests of those in remainder and devised the same to Elizabeth his wife for life—then $\frac{1}{4}$ to Mr Dawson Turner, Mr James Turner and Mr Powell—$\frac{1}{4}$ to Rev. Dean Turner—$\frac{1}{4}$ to Rev. Richard Turner—and $\frac{1}{4}$ to Mrs Dade. All these several persons, by deeds dated 9th and 10th Novr 1814 conveyed the Manor and the bulk of the Estate to Andrew Johnston of Hempnall, in Norfolk in fee. This gentleman, who was a West India proprietor, went to Jamaica soon after his purchase, and in July 1830 the Manor and Estate were sold by auction at Yarmouth and were purchased by Francis Turner Esqre of Lincoln's Inn, London, who is the present Lord."

Note.—Francis Turner, who bought Fritton Manor in 1830, was grandson of the Rev. Francis Turner, and nephew of Francis Turner, surgeon. He afterwards sold the property.

Yarmouth News:

Yesterday died here, Mrs Turner, aged 76, widow of the Rev. Mr Turner, formerly one of the Ministers of the Chapel in this town.

Note.—It has been frequently stated that Mrs. Turner's father, James Dawson, was a descendant of John Dawson, Collector of the Customs at Yarmouth, who died July 4th, 1678. Dawson Turner in his "Sepulchral Reminiscences," page 27, states:—

"John Dawson, Collector of Customs, died 1679, aged 56.

"A native of Loughborough, to which town he bequeathed £100, and the same sum to the Corporation of Yarmouth, for the payment of £5 yearly, for teaching poor children arithmetic & mathematics. He resided in the house in Jail Street, which is now occupied by Mr. Richd Branford, but which continued in the possession of his descendants till the family became extinct by the death of Mr. James Dawson, my father's uncle, in 1792. Their tombs still remain in the churchyard."

The above contains an error in the date of Mr. Dawson's death which took place in 1678, as is proved by his Will and the inscription on his gravestone. His Will, of which an abstract is given, shows that he was probably unmarried, and also confirms the date on the gravestone. These facts seem to prove that Mr. Dawson Turner was mistaken in making his grandmother a descendant of this John Dawson. Sarah Dawson, Mr. Dawson Turner's grandmother, was undoubtedly the daughter of Mr. James Dawson, who with his wife Martha and his father, Stephen Dawson, are buried at the West end of the Old Churchyard, Great Yarmouth, and their gravestones within an iron railing remain to this day. The annexed pedigree, made out from existing gravestones and records, shows the real descent of Mrs Francis Turner.

REV. FRANCIS TURNER, M.A.

The operation here described seems to be a valuable improvement in surgery; and M^{r} Turner candidly acknowledges that the idea of it was suggested to him by D^{r} Aikin of Yarmouth, who has the merit, he adds, of all the advantages the patient will certainly derive from the operation having been performed in the middle of the foot, instead of the usual place below the knee.

NOTE.—Professor Farabeuf (Manuel Opératoire, Paris, 1889, 3rd edition, page 426) says that according to Hancock, the operation above alluded to was performed "for the first time in England by Turner, junior, of Yarmouth in 1787." He gives a complete description of the operation, which he says is simple.

"Sir Astley's [Astley Paston Cooper, the Surgeon, son of Dr Cooper, Minister of Yarmouth] professional studies commenced during his residence at Yarmouth, in the surgery of my uncle, Mr Francis Turner. But his stay there was very short."

BRANSBY BLAKE COOPER.—"THE LIFE OF SIR ASTLEY COOPER, BART."

First Extract, Vol. I., pp. 101, 102.

It has been erroneously stated, that prior to his departure from Yarmouth, he was initiated into the practice of pharmacy and general medicine at the house of Mr. Francis Turner, an apothecary of that town. The mistake has in all probability arisen from the circumstance of his having subsequently when visiting his father during the vacations at the hospital, sometimes engaged in pharmaceutical pursuits in the surgery of Mr. Turner, in order that he might not altogether lose sight of professional employment.

Second Extract, Vol. I., pp. 116, 117.

I have often heard Sir Astley relate the following anecdote, but do not remember hearing him mention the date of its occurrence; as, however, his indulgence in practical jocularities yielded about this period to more serious pursuits, it most probably occurred about this time (1785). It well exemplifies his readiness of invention, and the tact which he was well known as a boy eminently to possess, in escaping out of any difficult position in which circumstances might suddenly place him.

One day, when Mr. Turner the apothecary was in the surgery, giving orders to one of the apprentices, Astley Cooper, who was standing behind him, attempted to excite laughter in the apprentice by twisting his face into various grimaces, and practising other antics. The disturbance which soon followed in the apprentice's features caught the notice of Mr. Turner, who quickly turning round in the apparent direction of its cause, discovered Astley Cooper in the midst of the employment above mentioned; and seemingly in extreme astonishment at his strange behaviour, at once, and with eagerness, inquired its cause. Astley, without exhibiting any signs of discomposure, or ceasing to make the contortions in which he was detected, returned no answer to the inquiry, but an exclamation, in a tone of much distress, of "Oh! my tooth! my tooth!" "God bless me, let me see," said Mr. Turner, and on the instant removing young Cooper's hand from his cheek, and forcibly opening his mouth, with a hasty remark, he whipped in a pair of forceps, and, to the amusement of the astonished apprentice, before Astley had time to recover himself or explain the deception, had wrenched out one of his double teeth.

The tooth which Mr. Turner thus extracted was decayed, and so, not thinking it worth while making any explanation, Cooper merely expressed himself much relieved, and thanked his benefactor. Sir Astley used to say, however, that he never could determine in his own mind whether it was not intended as a punishment for the interruption he had made, or whether, believing him really in earnest, Mr. Turner had, in pity for his supposed sufferings, displayed such activity in applying the remedy.

Third Extract, Vol. I., pp. 136 to 139.

I am enabled, however, to give a more detailed account than the above, of his (Sir Astley Cooper's) occupations during this summer (1786), from an interesting communication which I have received from Mr. Holland, of Knutsford, a gentleman who, both during this visit to Yarmouth, and afterwards at Mr. Cline's, was an intimate associate and friend of Sir Astley Cooper. The reader will perceive that this letter removes all doubt concerning the nature of the connexion of Sir Astley Cooper with Mr. Turner of Yarmouth.

". . . In the summer of 1786, I was on a visit to my excellent friend, the late Dr. Aikin, who was at that time resident in Great Yarmouth, and was practising as a physician there. He spoke to me in high terms of your uncle, who had not then completed his eighteenth year, and predicted that he would become eminent in his profession.

He introduced us to each other, and we soon became intimate friends. Two years before—if I rightly recollect—your uncle had been articled to Mr. Cline for seven years, with a condition attached to this, that he should, if he wished it, be allowed to pass one winter of the time in Edinburgh. When I first knew him at Yarmouth, he was staying at his father's, the Rev. Dr. Cooper, the Vicar of Great Yarmouth, where he was permitted to remain till the recommencement of the lectures in London in the beginning of October. During the first months of his visit he was very much at Mr. Francis Turner's, an apothecary, with a view of gaining a knowledge of pharmacy; but this was solely by the permission of Mr. Turner, who wished to shew kindness to your uncle, for he was in no way engaged to him."

The history of this gentleman is sufficiently curious to warrant a place in these Memoirs.

Mr. Turner was in some measure connected with Sir Astley Cooper; his brother, Mr. Richard Turner, having married Miss Rede, a sister of my mother. Mr. Francis Turner was by inheritance independent of his profession, and also married a lady of considerable fortune. He was endowed with excellent abilities, acquired great fame as a surgeon and apothecary, and indeed was the only person of his profession in Yarmouth competent to perform operations in surgery, which he always undertook with much avidity. He was consequently called upon to act in all cases in his neighbourhood which required surgical assistance, and indeed, his practice extended to Lowestoft, Beccles, and other towns in the vicinity.

When Sir Edward Lacon, the grandfather of the present baronet, was mayor of the town of Yarmouth (1792), some disturbances took place, and certain rioters were imprisoned in the gaol. A mob collected with the determination of setting these persons at liberty, upon which Mr. Turner took a very active part in attempting to maintain the authority of the law. During his exertions he received a severe blow on the head, inflicted by one of the ruffians with one of the wooden palings which had been placed so as more securely to defend the doorway of the prison. Mr. Turner having been assisted home, it was found, upon examination, that the bone of the skull was laid bare, but was apparently unbroken. He was, however, much alarmed ; declared that he could not survive the accident, and sank into a state of despondency, which was soon attended by indigestion and all the aggravated symptoms of dyspepsia. He remained in this state for two years, continually insisting that his illness was the effect of a portion of the bone having been depressed at the time of the accident, and that his weakened powers of assimilation were attributable to the irritation of the brain, consequent on the same cause. Astley's uncle, Mr. William Cooper, at this time paid a visit to Yarmouth, and at the earnest solicitation of Mr. Turner, removed with a trephine a small portion of bone from that part of the head on which the blow had been received. The bone was found to be perfectly healthy, nor did the coverings of the brain show any indications of injury.

As might be supposed, Mr. Turner derived no benefit from the operation, and he continued to become more and more emaciated, unable to retain any food on his stomach, until at last he sank, completely exhausted. During the last twelve months of his life, Mr. Borrett, of Yarmouth, who was then his apprentice, informs me he lived almost entirely upon nuts, Mr. Turner stating that he was unable to digest any other solid food. He was examined after death, and his liver was found so much diseased as readily to account for all his symptoms. Indeed, none of the medical men of his acquaintance at any time believed that he was suffering from injury of the brain, but nothing could divert him from the conviction with which he had been impressed. Dr. Girdlestone was at this time an eminent physician at Yarmouth, and as is well known, was much addicted to the employment of calomel in his practice. Against this drug, as well as against Dr. Girdlestone himself, Mr. Turner had always considerable prejudice, and he therefore on this occasion did not consult the doctor, whose remedy might have been of most essential service to the sufferer. The portion of bone which Mr. William Cooper removed, was worn by Mrs. Turner about her neck until the period of her death, which did not take place until nearly forty years after the loss of her husband.

Aged 52 years.

The "Suffolk Chronicle," July 24th, 1858, gives the following Account of Dawson Turner, Esq., F.R.S.

Dawson Turner, Esq., of Great Yarmouth, the accomplished scholar, the distinguished botanist, and the industrious antiquary—the great banker who was as eminent at the commencement of the present century among the literary men of East Anglia as Rogers, the banker, was among the literary men of the metropolis—has gone from among us. He died June 20th, 1858, at Old Brompton, at the patriarchal age of 83. His advanced age prevents his labours and various services to science and literature from being so well known as they deserve to persons of the present generation; but all who can recur back thirty or forty years will remember with pleasure his taste, his talents, and his hospitality. His library was a complete storehouse of knowledge, consisting of nearly 8,000 vols., unrivalled, perhaps, in expensive botanical, topographical, historical, and antiquarian works, and was always accessible to those who desired to consult it. His edition of Blomefield's History of Norfolk was enriched by upwards of 2,000 original drawings of antiquities in the county, executed by the late Mrs. Dawson Turner and her accomplished daughters. He was a great encourager of native art, and he frequently employed artists to make sketches to illustrate the books in his library, and, in fact, spared no expense to make his collection the best extant. His collection of paintings comprised specimens by

MRS. DAWSON TURNER.

Jan Stein, Wilson, Vandyck, Rubens, Holbein, Teniers, Cuyp, A. Carracci, Gaspar Poussin, Gerard Dow, Crome, sen., and many other distinguished artists, besides numerous engravings of the French, Flemish, and Dutch Schools.

Mr. Turner was born at Great Yarmouth in October, 1775. His father was an eminent banker, and the son Dawson was first educated at the Grammar School at North Walsham, Norfolk, under the Rev. Joseph Hepworth, and afterwards removed for private tuition to Barton, in the same county, under the Rev. Robert Forby. His father was more desirous of making him a "spiritual adviser" than a "money lender,"—of rendering him more familiar with the "Articles and the Liturgy" than with notes and checks;" and in 1793 Dawson was entered of Pembroke College, Cambridge, of which his uncle, afterwards Dean of Norwich, was master. Church privileges and church preferments had no fascination for our young student, and not intending to pursue the clerical profession, he did not graduate. At the death of his parent he succeeded to the extensive banking concern in Yarmouth, and married the daughter of Wm. Palgrave, Esq., of Coltishall, in Norfolk.

A taste for natural history and a love for botanical studies were exhibited early in life by Mr. Turner, and the immense wealth of which he at the death of his parent became the possessor enabled him to indulge his preferences and devote his energies to the prosecution of his favourite pursuits. He was elected a Fellow of the Linnæan Society in 1797, and contributed many valuable papers on the Algæ, Lichens, and Mosses to the Transactions of the Society. He was also a contributor to Konig and Sim's Annals of Botany. He belonged to the old or Linnæan school of botanists, and was among them very distinguished. But his fame rests on his knowledge of cryptogamic plants. No botanist of his day was better acquainted with the genera and species of lichens and mosses than Mr. Turner, and his "Synopsis of the British Fuci," 1802, and his "Historia Fucorum," 1808, four large vols., with 258 coloured plates, attest both his knowledge and energy in botanical pursuits, whilst none but an ardent lover of science, with a princely fortune at his command, could have published such a work as the last-mentioned. His knowledge of British plants was very considerable, and the "Botanist's Guide" compiled by himself and L. W. Dillwyn, Esq., was at the time of its publication (1805) a work of great value. It laid the foundation for Watson's valuable "Guide to the localities of the Rarer Plants of Britain," and to other similar works of the same author. By his assistance of rising botanists, by his purchase of costly books, by his correspondence and encouragement, for his purse was always open to support the cause, Dawson Turner promoted British botany in a very eminent degree. All his botanical collections form part of those at Kew, and are under the care of his worthy son-in-law, Sir W. J. Hooker. Among them the Algæ are remarkable for their extent and their rarity, and also for their being authority for the many new species he described in his works.

Although his love of Botany continued with him to the last, he relinquished the study of it some forty years since, in favour of Antiquities, General Literature, and the Fine Arts. His publications in this department were, "Sepulchral Reminiscences of Yarmouth," "Historical Sketches of Caistor Castle," "Tour in Normandy, chiefly undertaken with a view of investigating the Architectural Antiquities of the Duchy," and "Letter-press to Cotman's Etchings of Architectural Antiquities in Normandy." These works reflect equal credit on his taste and judgment. His library, constantly enriched by fresh additions of the most expensive works, now became as valuable to the Antiquary as it had previously been to the Botanist. He permitted the use of it very freely, and subscribed liberally in aid of local explorations and scientific meetings.

Mr. Turner's manuscripts and letters, illustrating the history of Great Britain, in 5 large volumes, were the most extensive ever collected in East Anglia. These volumes contained letters of Cardinal Wolsey, Sir Thomas More, Henry VIII., Anne Boleyn, Catherine of Arragon, Bishop Ridley, Rowland Taylor, John Bradford, Latimer, Cranmer, Sir Thomas Gresham, Lord Treasurer Burleigh, Villiers Duke of Buckingham, to James I., commencing, "Dere dad and gossope," and ending, "your most humble slave," &c. Also an "Order of Privy Council for the apprehension of all illegal dealers in tobacco within the town of St. Edmund's Bury, Suffolk," and a copy of a letter from King Charles I. to the Earl of Strafford, assuring him, "upon the word of a king," that he should not "suffer in life, honour, or fortune." This letter was written upon the very morning of the day on which the King signed the warrant for the Earl's execution.

The worship of wealth is among us a widespread national vice. Esteem and station, or personal worth, do not obtain the consideration which wealth commands. When, some years since, at the funeral of our respected townsman, Dykes Alexander, all Ipswich seemed desirous of following his remains to the grave, we queried in our own mind how many went out of esteem for the MAN, and how many out of HOMAGE to the BANKER. In the same spirit, we fear, scientific and literary honours were thrust upon Dawson Turner. Having joined the Linnæan Society in 1797, he was two years after elected a Fellow of the Physical Society of Gottingen. In 1800, he was chosen a member of the Imperial Academy, which diploma was accompanied by another, conferring the honorary degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy. He was made an F.R.S. in 1802, and F.S.A. in 1803 [Jan. 27th], and chosen a member of the Dublin Society in 1804, and of the Royal Irish Academy in the same year—of the Wernerian Natural History Society of Edinburgh in 1808—of the Royal Academy of Sciences at Stockholm in 1816—of the Royal Academy of Sciences and Belles Lettres of Rouen in 1818—of the Academy of Sciences and Arts of Caen in 1820—of the Naturforschenda Geselschaft, at Leipzig, in 1822—and, finally, of the Royal Society of Literature in 1824.

Mr. Turner's valuable library, his fine collection of illuminated missals, his manuscripts and his paintings, were brought to the hammer by Messrs. Sotheby and Wilkinson in 1853, the sale occupying 13 days, and effectually distributing the unrivalled collection. An effort was made by some gentlemen to raise a sum of money for the purchase, at the sale, of such scarce works as were particularly connected with East Anglia, but, as might be expected, the effort failed. There was not public spirit enough in this district to support such a movement. Had it been Manchester, instead of Norfolk and Suffolk, failure would have been scouted.

For several years Mr. Turner had, from some unfortunate circumstances, been unhappily estranged from his own family. Reconciliations had recently taken place, and Sir W. J. Hooker was in almost constant attendance. Dr. Brown, a distinguished philosophical botanist, died on the 12th of June, and Mr. Turner on the 20th of June, within a very few days of his old friend and botanical associate. When Sir William Hooker announced to him the death of Dr. Brown, he said, as soon as he comprehended it, "poor fellow," and these were the last words he distinctly uttered.

One of Mr. Turner's daughters married Sir Francis Palgrave, another Sir William Hooker, and a third is unmarried. His only son, the Rev. Dawson Turner, is the author of a very clever analysis of Roman history, as well as other works of distinction.

SILVERPEN.

NOTE.—The first portion of Mr. Turner's library was sold by Sotheby in 1853, realising £4,562 15s. 0d.; and the remaining portion in May, 1859, the two sales occupying twenty-one days. The collections of MSS. and autographs were sold in June, 1859, for £6,558 9s. 0d.

A biographical notice of Mr. Dawson Turner appears in the Dictionary of National Biography, vol. 57, page 324.

The arms of Turner, viz :—Sable, a chevron ermine, between three millrinds or, on a chief argent, a lion passant gules, impaling Palgrave, viz. :—Azure, a lion rampant argent; were placed in the windows of the Tolhouse, at Great Yarmouth, by the late Francis Turner Palgrave, Esq., a subscriber of the restoration of that building.

Mr. Dawson Turner was born in a house, No. 40, Middlegate Street (late Gaol Street), at one time the property of Mr. James Hargrave Harrison, who wrote the following lines and had them inserted (I believe) on a tablet in the house. The house was a good specimen of a merchant's residence, but it has recently been converted into a shop.

Branford House, 40, Gaol Street,

(Formerly Middlegate and Middle Street,)

North Corner of Row 119,

Great Yarmouth,

One of the 26 residences depicted on Corbridge's Map of the Town. A.D. 1724.

Alyen Couldham, of Gunton, in 1534 this House did build,
And by John, his son, four times Bailiff, 'twas long after held.
For full two Centuries following, 'tis right you should know
The Mansion, including Garden, ran three parts up the Row:
The Collingwoods, the Barrets, and Lyndsey (George) of Loddon,
Were also its possessors before 'twas first made modern:
Here too did the praiseworthy Squire, Edward Owner, live,
Twenty Years in Parliament the Town's Representative.
Thomas Osborne, the cruel father, from its walls did hie;
Read his daughter's Epitaph, and seek well his history.
Here sixscore years the Dawsons dwelt, a family of renown;
John five pounds a year bequeathed for Schooling in the Town;
And within was Dawson Turner born, the far-famed Antiquary,
Whose paternal Grandfather did the Captain's daughter marry.
Bridge, Captain Riches, and Colonel Mapes likewise resided here;
After them Lady D'Urban, who'd a thousand pounds a year.
A Musician and Dancing Master was the next to occupy,
His names were given in baptism to his nephew Barnaby.
Later on the Bearts, D'Aveney, and Richard Branford hire,
Till, in eighteen fifty, James Hargrave Harrison was the buyer.
The last-named for his residence did it forthwith re-modernize,
And being then a young unmarried man, reduced it much in size.
A dozen and six years after this—the second time he married,
The fine old front was stuccoed down, and the walls a new roof carried.

REV. DAWSON WILLIAM TURNER, M.A., D.C.L.

Dawson William Turner, the youngest son of Mr. Dawson Turner, Banker, of Great Yarmouth, was born on 24 December, 1815. He was educated at Rugby, and matriculated from Exeter College, Oxford, in 1834. Two years later he entered at Magdalen College in the same University, where he took his B.A. degree in 1838, and two years later his M.A. In 1862 the degree of D.C.L. was conferred upon him. For some years he was Head Master of the Royal Institution School, Liverpool. He was the author of a number of useful historical and educational works; among them are Heads of an Analysis of French and English History, London, 1845, 16mo (a 6th Edition, 1865). Also similar Analyses of Roman (1853), Grecian (1853), and German (1866) History, most of which have passed through several editions. In 1848 he produced a vol. of Notes on Herodotus, besides translations of Pindar's Odes and Aristophanes' plays. He was a man of great benevolence, and liberally assisted many London Hospitals. He died in London, 29 January, 1885. There is a short notice of him in the Dictionary of National Biography, LVII. 335.

SIR WILLIAM JACKSON HOOKER, K.H.
1785—1865.

MISS MARIA TURNER.

SIR WILLIAM JACKSON HOOKER, K.H., F.R.S., &c., AND MARIA HIS WIFE, DAUGHTER OF DAWSON TURNER, Esq.

William Jackson Hooker, born at Norwich, 6 July, 1785, was the only surviving son of Mr. Joseph Hooker, of Exeter, said to be descended from the same family as Richard Hooker, the author of the Ecclesiastical Polity. He was educated at the Norwich Grammar School, under Dr. Foster. From his very early days his inclination towards natural history and botany became apparent, and when he was about twenty, he in company with Mr. Dawson Turner and Mr. Wm. Borrer, undertook a tour in the lesser known parts of Scotland, and some three years later he went to Iceland. An account of his Iceland travels was privately printed at Keymer's press in Yarmouth, in 1811, this being his earliest work. In 1806 he was elected a member of the Linnæan Society, and in 1812 of the Royal Society. In 1820 he became Professor of Botany in Glasgow University, mainly on Sir Joseph Banks' recommendation, and later on the degrees of LL.D of that University and D.C.L. of Oxford were conferred upon him. In 1836 he was created a Knight of Hanover, in consideration of his valuable scientific services. At Glasgow he remained for some years, until in 1841 he was appointed to the Directorship of the Royal Botanic Gardens, at Kew. Under his directions these Gardens were greatly improved and extended, and in conjunction with Professor Henslow, he started the Museum there. Sir William Hooker was the author of many important books, and papers on botany and other subjects—a list of thirty-nine of his more important works is given in the Dictionary of National Biography, XXVII., 296: and in the Royal Society's Catalogue, no less than eighty-three papers are enumerated, of which he was either whole or part author.

Sir William Hooker married in 1815, Maria, the eldest daughter of Mr. Dawson Turner, of Great Yarmouth, himself no mean botanist, and for a short time they lived at Halesworth in Suffolk, prior to moving to Glasgow. Sir William Hooker died at Kew, on the 12th August, 1865, where only a day or two before his death he had been superintending improvements; and Lady Hooker died at Torquay, on 26 September, 1872, in her 75th year. He was succeeded in the Directorship of Kew Gardens, by his son, Dr. Joseph Dalton Hooker, now Sir J. D. Hooker, G.C.S.I., F.R.S., C.B., &c., who retained this post for twenty years. He was born at Halesworth on the 30th June, 1817. He is still living at the advanced age of eighty-nine, a botanist and traveller of even greater distinction than his father. In 1839, after he had taken his degree of M.D. at Glasgow, Sir Joseph Hooker accompanied Sir J. C. Ross in the Erebus and Terror, on their three years voyage in the Antarctic Regions. Between 1847 and 1853 he made a tour in India, an account ot which he published in 1854. His travels have extended to the southern parts of Europe, North Africa, Palestine, India to the Chinese Frontier, and North America from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

MISS ELIZABETH TURNER.

SIR FRANCIS PALGRAVE, K.H., 1844.

1788—1861.

SIR FRANCIS PALGRAVE, K.H., F.R.S.

He was born in London, on July 13th, 1788, and at eight years of age translated the Battle of the Frogs and Mice from Latin into French. He served his articles with a firm of Solicitors in Basinghall Street, and at this period he contributed articles to some of the minor periodicals of the day. He was called to the Bar (Middle Temple), in 1827, and became a regular contributor to the Edinburgh and Quarterly Reviews. In 1831 he was knighted, in acknowledgment of his contributions to constitutional and parliamentary history. About this period he became instrumental in formulating a scheme whereby the national records and state papers, which were distributed about in many different offices, were collected into one central office. By his energy and persistence this scheme was carried out, and in 1838, he was appointed Deputy Keeper of the Public Records. During his tenure of office the first block of the now well-known Public Record Office in Chancery Lane, was erected. He also edited many important works for the Record Commission. In 1832, he published his greatest work, The Rise and Progress of the English Commonwealth. His other works were The Merchant and Friar, an historical story (1837), and The History of Normandy and England (1851), which was never completed. Sir Francis Palgrave was for many years a member of the Royal Society.

In 1823 he married Elizabeth, the second daughter of Mr. Dawson Turner, of Great Yarmouth, and with the assent of William Palgrave, Esq., the then head of the family, assumed by Royal licence the name of Palgrave, and obtained from the Heralds' College a grant of arms as follows :—Per pale azure and gules ; a lion rampant argent : on a canton or an escarbuncle of the second : and for a crest—on a wreath of the colours ; between two branches of palms proper, a leopard's head affrontée erased argent, charged on the neck with an escarbuncle sable—the motto, " Laudans invocabo Dominum." Sir Francis Palgrave died at Hampstead Green, on 6 July, 1861, and was buried at Irstead in Norfolk, where Lady Palgrave, who died 8th August, 1852, had been buried.

MARY ANN TURNER, DAUGHTER OF DAWSON TURNER, Esq.

Inscription on Stone, in the Churchyard, at the West End of the Parish Church, Great Yarmouth.

[on the same stone as Mrs. Dawson Turner—]
Mary Anne
third daughter of
Dawson & Mary Turner :
Born February 7th 1803
Died September 29th 1874.

Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, yea Saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labours and their works do follow them.

Miss Turner was the writer of the greater part, if not all, of the History of Caistor Castle, published in 8vo, in 1842, and which contained many etched plates by her. She was very largely instrumental in forming the extra illustrated copy of her father's Blomefield, now in the British Museum; and to her skilful and ever willing pencil, Mr. Dawson Turner, in the preface to his catalogue of these illustrations published in 1841, acknowledges himself considerably indebted. She spent her life in Yarmouth, and was devoted to deeds of charity. She died unmarried, and is buried in the churchyard there with her mother.

LADY PALGRAVE, 1799—1852:

AND

MARY ANNE TURNER, 1803—1874.

MRS. JOHN GUNN, 1838.

1806—1869.

HARRIET, DAUGHTER OF DAWSON TURNER, Esq., AND WIFE OF JOHN GUNN, M.A., F.G.S.

Inscription on a Stone in Irstead Churchyard, Norfolk.

Harriet, wife of the Rev. John Gunn; M.A. Rector of this parish, died Sept. 27, 1869, aged 63 years.

Mrs. Gunn was the author of "Letters written during a four days' tour in Holland," privately printed 1834, 8vo [Edited by Dawson Turner]. In the copy in the British Museum, the illustrations are some of them coloured and others drawn in pen and ink.

JOHN GUNN, M.A., F.G.S.

(Sometime Rector of Irstead and Barton Turf).

John Gunn, born 9th Oct^r^ 1801, at Irstead, Norfolk, was the son of the Rev. Wm. Gunn, B.D., Rector of Irstead and Vicar of Barton Turf, 1787-1829, and Rector of Sloley, 1784-1841. The Rev. Wm. Gunn was the author of an account of the Tapestries in the Vatican, entitled "Cartonensia." He also wrote on mediæval history and Italian literature and art. Mr. John Gunn was first of all sent to school at Wymondham, and afterwards to the Norwich Grammar School, where he had for school-fellows, among others, George Borrow, James Brooke (of Borneo), John Lindley, and James Martineau. After leaving Norwich he went to Oxford, where he took his B.A. degree in 1824, and three years later his M.A. Soon after he studied for the Bar, and in 1827 entered as a Barrister at Lincoln's Inn, but he eventually decided to enter the Church, and was ordained in 1829 by Bishop Bathurst, of Norwich, and became Rector of Irstead and Vicar of Barton Turf on his father's resignation. On the 27th of April, 1830, he married Harriet, fourth daughter of Mr. Dawson Turner, of Great Yarmouth. Three years later he became a member of the Norfolk and Norwich Museum, and he was also one of the original members of the Norfolk and Norwich Archæological Society (founded 1846), on the Committee of which he continued to serve to the end of his life. He was President of the Norwich Geological Society from its foundation in 1864 to the year 1877, and to show his keen interest in geology, it may be mentioned that he was 87 when he attended the meeting of the International Geological Congress at London, and visited with them the Pliocine beds discovered at St. Erth.

In 1868 Mr. Gunn presented his very fine collection of Fossil mammalia to the Norwich Castle, where his portrait, painted a year or two later, hangs in company with those of other generous benefactors. In 1869 he had the misfortune to lose his wife, and not long after he resigned his living, on which occasion he issued a letter to his parishioners stating that he did so from conscientious scruples as to certain Biblical statements which he conceived to be irreconcilable with the teachings of Natural Science. He subsequently travelled abroad, returning to Norwich, where he married in 1872, Eliza, daughter of Mr. James Moore. He died on 28 May, 1890, and was buried in the Rosary Cemetery, at Norwich. Mr. Gunn wrote many papers in the Geological journals, his observations being chiefly directed to the Cliff sections along the Coasts of Norfolk and Suffolk, between Weybourne and Kessingland. He also wrote the letterpress to the Illustrations of the Roodscreen at Barton Turf, published by the Norfolk and Norwich Archæological Society. A memoir of Mr. Gunn was published, together with some of his Geological Essays, in 1891, from which most of the above notice is compiled.

In 1839-40, he was perpetual curate of Iffley, and soon after was appointed Public Orator at Oxford, and on Dr. Hampden's vacating the Divinity Chair, he was appointed to succeed him. He afterwards became Bishop of Chester, and it was during his Episcopate that the diocese was divided and the present diocese of Liverpool formed in 1880. Four years later he resigned his Bishopric, and died at Chester on 13 July, 1884. He was the author of numerous sermons, charges, &c., his most important works being "Patres Apostolici," 2 vols., 1838-63, and an edition of the works of Bishop Sanderson, of Lincoln, in 6 volumes in 1854. An account of Dr. Jacobson will be found in the "Dictionary of National Biography," from which some of the preceding memoranda are derived.

His arms, impaled with those of the see of Chester, are in the windows of the Tolhouse Hall at Great Yarmouth, to the restoration of which he contributed.

Joseph Turner, D.D.
Dean of this Church died March 10, 1804
aged 40.

INSCRIPTION ON A BRASS ON THE EAST WALL OF THE SOUTH TRANSEPT OF NORWICH CATHEDRAL.

Sacred to the memory of Joseph Turner, D.D.
Master of Pembroke College, Cambridge, and Dean of this Cathedral who died August II^nd^ MDCCCXXVIII aged 82.

For the possession of these honourable situations he was mainly indebted to the exertions of his own industry and ability, having distinguished himself as Senior Wrangler at the Bachelors' Commencement of 1767. He shortly after became Fellow and Tutor of his College. In this latter situation he superintended the education of that celebrated statesman, William Pitt, through whose recommendation he was promoted to the dignity of Dean of this Cathedral in 1791, having previously in 1784 been chosen Master of Pembroke.

His virtues as a Husband, a Father, and a Friend, are too deeply engraven on the hearts of all who knew him, to require this monument to keep him in their remembrance.

The general uprightness and integrity of his character, were invariably acknowledged by all with whom the duties of his public situations brought him in connection.

His remains are deposited in the Choir of this Cathedral, together with those of Mary his first Wife, eldest daughter of Philip Derbishire, Esq^re^ who died March X^th^ MDCCCIV.

This monument is erected to the memory of his parents as a small testimony of gratitude and affection by their only child.

NOTE.—There are two errors in this Inscription—The Dean died on the 3^rd^ of August and he was Installed Dean on 24^th^ June, 1790.

In grateful remembrance by her affectionate Niece.

Death:—At the Deanery, Norwich, aged 82, the Very Rev. Joseph Turner, D.D., F.S.A., Dean of Norwich, Master of Pembroke College, Cambridge, and Rector of Sudborne and Orford, Suffolk.

He was a student of Pembroke College, and was Senior Wrangler on taking his Bachelor's degree in 1767. He proceeded M.A. in 1770 and was elected Fellow.

In 1784, he became Master, and proceeded D.D. per literas Regias, was presented to his Suffolk Churches by the King in 1787, and in 1790 to the Deanery of Norwich.

"Norwich Mercury," August 9th, 1828.

On Sunday last, in the 83rd year of his age, and in the 38th year of his deanery, the Very Rev. Joseph Turner, Doctor in Divinity, Dean of the Cathedral of Norwich, Master of Pembroke College, Cambridge, Rector of Sudborne with Orford in Suffolk, and Fellow of the Antiquarian Society. Dr Turner, Tutor to the late William Pitt, was elected to the Mastership of his College 1784, instituted to the above living 1787, and installed Dean on the decease of Dr Lloyd on the 24th June, 1790, in the Bishopric of Dr Horne.

During the long period the late Dean has occupied this station, the Cathedral and the property belonging to the Church has undergone very considerable alterations and improvements. In 1806, the Church was completely repaired and several ornamental additions made; the Upper Close and Dean's Square have also been considerably improved — the former by the centre being inclosed with palisades and formed into a garden, to which the inhabitants have access by private keys—the latter was altered in 1806 by several houses being taken down at the North East corner, by which the way leading to Bishopsgate was much widened.

Dr Turner was most highly esteemed by the Clergy, to whom his long and excellent life more strongly united him.

Every preparation is making to pay due honour to his memory; the Cathedral is already hung with black cloth, by Mr.

Cox, of Queen Street, to whom all arrangements are entrusted. The Funeral will take place, we understand, on Tuesday, at the Cathedral.

NOTE.—Dean Turner was elected F.S.A. Dec. 24th, 1801.

The Servants of the Family, male and female.

The Procession met at nine o'clock in the morning at the South Cloister door, and preceded the corpse in the above order along the South and West sides of the Cloisters, and on their arrival in the Nave, the Funeral Service commenced by the whole Choir singing, "I am the Resurrection and the Life," &c., composed by Dr. Croft.

On entering the Choir the Officers of the Church proceeded to their usual seats, the Bishop going to his Throne and remaining there during the rest of the service. After the Psalms had been chanted and the Lesson read by Mr. Banks, the Residentiary, the Procession, except the Bishop, preceded the corpse in the same order as before to the grave, the Organ playing the "Dead March in Saul," and ranged themselves on the Altar steps.

The Service at the grave commenced by the Choir singing, "Man that is Born of Woman," as set by Drs. Beckwith and Croft. The Prebendary read, "Forasmuch as it hath pleased," after which, that part of the service, "I heard a voice from Heaven," &c., was sung in a most impressive manner by Mr. Fenn, as a solo anthem—the music composed expressly for the occasion by Mr. Buck. The effect of this Anthem, performed as it was in a most masterly way by the composer and the singer, could not be surpassed, and the harmony of the concluding "Amen," by the whole Choir, will not soon be forgotten by those who heard it. The Residentiary afterwards finished the Service, and the Mourners left the Church, the Officers of the Cathedral remaining at the grave until they had left, and the organ playing whilst the Procession was moving away. The Choir of the Cathedral was hung with black. The black draperies were all full trimmed with great taste, particularly the seat of the Mayor, and had a very solemn effect. The Dean's stall was left without book or curtains, to signify that it is at present sedes vacans.

Dr. Turner was the 57th in succession from the first foundation of the Church and the establishment of the Priory, in the year 1101; from that period to the Reformation, there had succeeded 34 Priors, the last of whom, John Castleton, became the first Dean, since which there have been 23 Deans of this Cathedral.

At the Restoration Dr. Astley was appointed, who fitted up the Church with the Organ, &c., after it had been spoiled in those unhappy times, but the reparation was far from complete. Dr. Bullock was the first who began the reparation and improvement, since carried on and not yet completed. Dr. Lloyd did a great deal in the improvement both of the Church and Precincts; he added the painted windows and several other embellishments, but it was the deceased who brought the whole to the state in which it now appears.

Dr. Turner was installed in the year 1790, since which time there has been more done in and about the Church than in any former period. In 1806 the whole inside was completely renovated—the Organ was repaired and new gilt, all the draperies were renewed,

DEAN OF NORWICH.

&c. Some further improvements have since been added—the new pulpit and seats in the Choir, whereby several hundreds of persons can partake in the service and sermon, who before appear to be excluded. On the exterior of the Church workmen have ever since been kept in employ. The four angles of the Great Tower have been new cased, and every part of the original embellishments have been carefully preserved and restored, as also the greater part of the arches and windows on the South side of the Church, every part of the original design being strictly attended to; but as his very advanced age precluded the possibility of his perfecting this great work, it is most sincerely to be hoped that his successor will proceed with carrying on the improvements and repairs round every part of this extensive fabric.

"Norfolk Chronicle," March 5th, 1842.

Yesterday se'nnight at her residence, Upper Close, in the 85th year of her age—Mary, relict of late Very Rev. Joseph Turner, D.D., Dean of Norwich, and Master of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, and niece of the late Rev. John Peele, for many years the respected Minister of St. Peter Mancroft, in this City.

Lord Rosebery, "Life of Pitt," pages 7, 8.

Pitt was admitted at Pembroke Hall on the 26th of April, 1773, when he was not yet fourteen. By the kindness of the Rev. C. E. Searle, D.D., Master of Pembroke College, it is possible to print here the letter with which Chatham introduced his boy to the authorities.

It is addressed to Mr. Joseph Turner, then Senior Tutor of the College, and Senior Wrangler in 1767.

Burton Pynsent,
Oct. 3, 1773.

Sir,—Apprehensions of gout, about this season, forbid my undertaking a journey to Cambridge with my son. I regret this more particularly, as it deprives me of an occasion of being introduced to your Personal Acquaintance, and that of the Gentlemen of your Society; a loss I shall much wish to repair at some other time. Mr. Wilson, whose admirable Instruction and affectionate Care, have brought my son, early to receive such farther advantages, as he cannot fail to find, under your eye, will present him to you. He is of tender age, and of a health not yet firm enough to be indulged to the full in the strong desire he has to acquire useful knowledge. An ingenuous mind and docility of temper will, I know, render him conformable to your Discipline, in all points.

Too young for the irregularities of a man, I trust he will not, on the other hand, prove troublesome by the Puerile sallies of a Boy. Such as he is, I am happy to place him at Pembroke ; and I need not say how much of his Parents' hearts goes along with him.

I am, with great esteem and regard, Sir, your most faithful and most obedient humble servant,

CHATHAM.

REV. WILLIAM HAMILTON TURNER, M.A.

Early this morning died aged 44, Mrs. Turner wife of the Rev. Richard Turner, B.D. Minister of this place. This lady had been for many years subject to epileptic fits. She had retired into her closet alone between seven and eight on the evening preceding, and it is supposed that in one of these fits, she fell against the candle, and her clothes catching fire she was so dreadfully burnt that notwithstanding every medical remedy was procured, she expired a few hours after.

Death—Jan. 30. At Yarmouth, aged 60; Sarah wife of the Rev. Richard Turner, Minister of Great Yarmouth.

"Norwich Mercury," Oct. 17th, 1835.

On Tuesday last at Great Yarmouth, in the 84th year of his age, the Rev. Richard Turner, B.D., many years Minister of that parish, which preferment he resigned in 1830, in consequence of his advanced age.

Dawson Turner, "Sepulchral Reminiscences," pages 92-93.

It is really with reluctance that I devote a third consecutive note to my own family; nor would I, did I less strongly feel that he who is here commemorated was by no means a man to be passed by in silence in a work like this. "He was," as stated in his epitaph, "Minister of Yarmouth for thirty years, and during that period faithfully discharged the duties of his office, and enjoyed the respect and regard," to which may be added, in many instances, the affection "of his parishioners. His charge he resigned, in anticipation of increasing infirmities, five years before his death." In the course of his ministry he witnessed many of the occurrences mentioned in these pages, besides the foundation of two new churches, St Peter's and St Mary's, Southtown; and he never shrank from taking the leading part required by his situation, in the affairs of the town; keeping himself at the same time scrupulously clear from intermeddling in local politics or disputations. What has already been said of Mr. Steward and Mr. Shelly, may, with utmost truth, be applied to him, that "his name was always to be found among the promoters of whatever was liberal, benevolent, or useful." He was originally brought up to business in London, in the then important counting-house of Hanbury and Co., and he retained through life, greatly to his advantage, the habit of punctuality and dispatch, which such a training was calculated to inculcate. From the metropolis he withdrew in 1777, upon the death of his first wife, Miss Frances Kentish, with whose father and Mr. Haynes, he had been for a short time in partnership, as a Jeweller, in Cheapside. By her he had no family. His thoughts he then turned to the Church, and entered himself at Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, and shortly after, took Orders, and came to Yarmouth, where he resided till his death. In 1783 he again entered into matrimony with Miss Elizabeth Rede, the eldest daughter of Thomas Rede, Esq., an eminent solicitor at Beccles. The offspring of their marriage was twelve children, seven of whom still survive; and more unquestionable testimony could not be given to the excellence of either parent, than is afforded by the highly honourable stations in life occupied by the greater number of them. Of her also it was the will of the Almighty to deprive him in 1805; and, after a second widowhood of twelve years, he married Miss Sarah Parish, aunt of the present Sir Woodbine Parish. Her too, he lost, after an eleven years' union. My uncle throughout life, was much attached to literary pursuits; more especially in reference to his profession, and in the education of his children. He published nothing; but made large collections towards a History of Yarmouth,* the first part of which he has left in readiness for the press. His Society was much courted, and among those with whom it was his good fortune to associate, may be mentioned Dr. Parr, Dr. Watson, Bishop of Landaff, Dr. Paley, and Mr. Canning. The last of these was brought to Yarmouth by the residence of his near relative, the Rev. William Leigh, Dean of Hereford, at Plumstead; and his desire to serve my uncle, led him to take his son, Mr. William Turner, into the Foreign Office, where he rose to the high station of Minister Plenipotentiary to Columbia. Lord Chedworth, with whom my uncle lived in habits of intimacy, repeatedly mentions him in his Letters to Crompton, and always in terms of most gratifying panegyric. Speaking of Yarmouth society, p. 63, he writes, September 2nd, 1787, "with my visit there I was beyond measure delighted. I now absolutely pine for the pleasant conversation I enjoyed. You can hardly conceive the degree of pleasure I received from the conversation of Richard Turner." Still higher is the eulogium paid him by the son and biographer of Crabbe, the poet, who was many years his curate at Swefling in Suffolk. He tells us I., p. 168, that before his father would determine upon the publication of a volume of Poetical Tales in 1799, "he judiciously paused to consult the well-known taste of the Reverend Richard

* This MS. was sold at Mr. Dawson Turner's sale, and it has now found a fitting resting-place in the Reference Department of the Great Yarmouth Free Library. It was written in 1790, and contains a pencil sketch of the Rev. Turner, after the oil painting by S. Lane.

Turner, which friendly critic advised further revision, and his own mature opinion coinciding with that thus modestly hinted, he finally relinquished the intention." In the same strain the author proceeds; and however long the extract I am about to transcribe, I do not hesitate to add it to the present already long note; persuaded that the omission would be an act of injustice to my uncle's memory, and to the feelings of very many of his surviving friends, as it would assuredly be to my own. "Since I have been led," he says, "to mention Mr. Turner in this manner, let me be pardoned for adding, that one of the chief sources of comfort all through my father's residence in Suffolk was his connection with this honoured man. He considered his judgment a sure safeguard and reliance in all cases, practical and literary. The peculiar characteristic of his vigorous mind being an interest, not a seeming, but a real interest, in every object of nature and art, he had stored it with multifarious knowledge, and had the faculty of imparting some portion of the interest he felt on all subjects, by the zeal and relish with which he discussed them. With my father he would converse on natural history, as if this had been his whole study; with my mother, on mechanical contrivances and new inventions, for use or ornament, as if that were an exclusive taste; while he would amuse us young folks with well-told anecdotes; and to walk or ride with him was considered our happiest privilege. Mr Turner is too extensively and honorably known to need any such eulogy as I can offer; but my father's most intimate friend and chosen critic will forgive the effusion of my gratitude and respect." Yet further ought it to be mentioned in reference to my uncle, that he was the intimate friend of Ives, the Suffolk Antiquary, and that the honorable mention made avowedly of me in Nichols' Illustrations of Literature, V., p. 178, is really applicable to him.

Note.—The London Directory, 1774 and 1775, gives the address of Jno. Kentish, Jeweller, 18, Cornhill. The Directory for 1777 has, Jn. Kentish and Turner, Jewellers, 18, Cornhill. These names are not given by the Directory as those of traders in Cheapside.

Note.—Mr C. J. Jackson, F.S.A., in his "English Goldsmiths and their Marks" (1906), states that the earliest mention of John Kentish as a goldsmith occurs in 1773.

"GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE," 1816, PART I., PAGE 473.

Death, Sept. 21, 1815. At Allahabad, in his 32nd year, Richard Turner, junr. Esqre, Judge and Magistrate of Agra, and eldest son of the Rev. Richard Turner of Great Yarmouth.

He was on his passage from Agra to Calcutta to meet his wife, who was returning from England; and after attending to a sick friend, who died between Agra and Allahabad, was himself seized with a disorder to which medical skill was applied in vain. The gentleman in India, who communicated to his friend in England this melancholy information, closes his testimony of esteem with this expression: "In the fulness of truth I may declare, that in private as in public life, a better man, or a more valuable servant to the Company could not be found."

Alfred Master, F.R.C.S., in The History of the Family of Master, gives the following memoirs of Richard Turner, which are taken from the Indian papers published at the time of his decease:

At Allahabad on the 21 ultimo, Richard Turner, Esq., Judge and Magistrate at Agra.

Mr. Turner entered upon the stage of the world young in years, but rich in those qualifications which fit a man for the honourable discharge of the duties of life. His attainments in every branch of European learning were much more extensive than are usually found even in those who are called well-educated men, and on his arrival in this country, he sedulously and successfully devoted his life to the acquirement of the knowledge most requisite in the profession selected for him.

After being called to the public service, his progress was rapid and brilliant, and while in years almost a boy, he justified the high estimation in which his character was held, by an eminently able conduct in important and arduous situations. To the utmost purity of principle and a full sense of the obligations of public duty, he united understanding, distinguished both by quickness of perception and for soundness of judgment, and rendered infinitely valuable by a degree of assiduity and patience not often in combination with such high mental qualities, and which seemed to mark out the deceased, as calculated to adorn the eminently useful station which had fallen to his lot. This sketch of his public character is but feeble and defective; but who amongst the many that loved him, can portray to his own satisfaction, the gentleness and benevolence of heart, the winning sweetness of disposition and tranquility of temper, and above all, the utter carelessness of self, and the ardent affection to those around him that uniformly attended him in the daily intercourse of private life, and they will long leave their impression on the hearts of those who now lament his untimely death.

Second Notice.

On the 21st ultimo, at Allahabad, on his way to the Presidency, Richard Turner, Esq., Judge and Magistrate of Agra: most sincerely lamented. The death of this respectable and valuable man may be considered as a public loss, as well as an irreparable one to his family and friends; with a most enlightened mind, and a suavity of manners which endeared him to everyone, he fulfilled all the relative duties of a son, a husband, a father, a brother, and a friend, in the most exemplary manner. In discharge of the high trust reposed in him, he was allowed by his superiors to possess powerful mental abilities, which in his leisure hours he never failed to cultivate, by the study of those sciences which refine and exalt the human mind. Whether with respect to his religious principles we regard him in private life as a Christian, or view him in the wider sphere of moral action as a Judge and Magistrate, we find honour, humanity, and judgment to be leading features of his character; as he received the Christian truths with an humble faith, so were the Christian virtues his constant practice.

NOTE.—Richard Turner was appointed Writer August 29th, 1799, and after filling various intermediate posts was finally appointed Judge and Magistrate of Agra, January 1st, 1812.

EXTRACT FROM THE "PALL MALL GAZETTE," OF DEC. 6TH, 1899.

Major Henry Scott Turner: born May 1867, joined the Royal Highlanders Dec[r] 1887; Lieut. May 1890, and Brevet-Major May 1898: employed on special extra regimental service April 1894 to April 1899. Served in Matabeleland 1893-4, and in S. Africa 1896 as Adjutant and Paymaster to the Matabeleland Relief Force: for the latter services he received his brevet of Major.

COLONIAL PAPER—NAME AND DATE UNKNOWN.

The loss of Major Scott Turner at Kimberley will be deeply regretted, not only by those who knew his career and realized how promising this young officer was. A wider public, whose military memory is short, will understand something of what has been lost in him. Ever since the armoured train sortie to Macfarlanes, shortly after the investment of Kimberley began, Scott Turner had been brilliantly conspicuous in the engagements all round that town. On the 25th Nov[r] his horse was shot under him and he received a flesh wound himself in a gallant sortie: on the 28th he fell in the capture of the Boer laager. Had he lived Scott Turner would have gone far, but his death is one for his friends to be proud of.

We regret to have to announce the death of Thomas Joseph Turner, Esq., who expired at his seat, Little Olivers, on Sunday last, after a very brief illness, in his 81st year. The deceased gentleman was some years since a partner in the banking firm of Mills, Bawtree, Errington, and Co., in this town; he was also a Vice-Lieutenant and Magistrate of the County; and in 1840 filled the office of Mayor of Colchester; in all of which and other public capacities he acquitted himself not less with the shrewdness and tact of a man of business, than with the dignity and bearing of a perfect gentleman. In private life he was held in the highest esteem by a numerous circle of connexions and friends, by whom he will be much regretted. He leaves a widow and two daughters, one of whom is married to Otho Travers, Esq., Captain and Adjutant of the West Essex Militia.

The deceased gentleman, for many years, was connected with the banking firm of Messrs. Mills, Bawtree, and Co., from which he retired about 25 years since. Mr. Turner was for some years an Alderman in the Municipal Corporation of this Borough, and filled the Office of Mayor 1840-1. He was also Deputy-Lieutenant and Magistrate of the County, and a Director of the Colchester, Stour Valley, and Halstead Railway, and of the Essex and Suffolk Equitable Fire Office.

On the left hand side of the entrance are the following verses :—

The rich, the poor, the sorrowing and the gay
Lie here imbedded in one common clay :
Far from their homes they rest in foreign ground,
But heav'n, dear [? clear] road, from ev'ry land is found.
Here learn, ye proud, the nothingness of birth,
Of Power, Wealth, Beauty, fleeting gifts of earth ;
The richest treasures on the bed of death
Are " Love that casts out fear " and Works with Faith :
The succour'd widow's wail, and orphan's tear
Are the best Passports man can carry here :
To those who bear these gems of price, is given
The hope Religion shows of promis'd Heaven ;
Hope in the atoning blood that Jesus gave.
Who liv'd to teach us, and Who died to save.

On the right hand side of the gateway, these verses :—

Divitis atque inopis laeté tristisque quiescunt
Hic simul in gelido corpora mixta solo.
Hic procul a Patria externâ tellure premuntur
Sed via quœ Cœli est undique clara patet.
Stemmata nil valeant, nil Res, nil Forma, Potestas
Omnia ni virtus vana, Sepulchra docent.

Here rest the remains of George Pardali
A native of Rhodes
who died in Yarmouth
January 8th 1818
Aged 32 years

Early he left his native shore,
O'er many a land to roam,
And enter'd to return no more,
A foreign master's home.

The Parents, Friends that lov'd him most,
Caught not his latest breath;
But pity filled Affection's post
And smoothed his bed of death.

What recks it where his ashes bide,
He who his soul receiv'd,
Inquires not where the Wanderer died,
But how the Christian lived.

This stone was erected
In respect for his memory and
In gratitude for his Services
By his Master

She was the youngest daughter of Edward Archer, of Trelaske (1792—1834) by Charlotte Catherine his wife, only child of Charles Harward by Charlotte Augusta, his wife, 3rd daughter of Sir William Chambers: R.A.

Note.—Mrs. Mansfield Turner (Marianne Archer) had a Royal descent, her great-great-grandfather John Archer of Trelewack (ob: 1726) having married Sarah daughter and co-heir of John Addis of Plymouth by Elizabeth daughter of William Bond of Hollwood in the parish of Quethiock, whose wife Gertrude was the daughter of Henry Spoure, of Trebartha, co. Cornwall, son of Richard Spoure of the same place (living in 1620) by Mary his wife eldest daughter of Peter Courtenay of Trethurffe and Landrake, Sheriff of Cornwall 1573. This Peter Courtenay belonged to the Powderham Castle family and was seventh in descent from Hugh de Courteney 2nd Earl of Devon, K.G. (1303-1377) who married Margaret de Bohun, daughter of Humphrey Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Essex, Lord High Constable of England, by Elizabeth seventh daughter of Edward I, King of England and Queen Eleanor his wife, daughter of Ferdinand III, King of Castile.

Much information about the Archer family will be found in Sir John Maclean's History of Trigg Minor. Swete Nicholas Archer, son of the above mentioned John Archer, who married Sarah Addis in 1708, inherited from his maternal uncle Samuel Addis, the estate of Trelaske, where the Archers have resided ever since.

THE REV. HARWARD TURNER, M.D. (PARIS).

Harward Turner was born on the 21st March, 1857, at North Hill House, Frome, and was baptised at Holy Trinity Church there. He was the second son of Lieut.-Colonel Mansfield, of Glen View House, near Bath. He was educated at Shrewsbury Grammar School, and began life by taking up Music as a profession. He devoted much time to the Organ and the Piano, achieving some success as a Pianist, and indeed to the last day of his life he was a brilliant performer on the Piano. Finding that this work involved considerable strain on his nervous system, he decided to relinquish it and enter the Church. Having studied at St Bees and Lichfield Theological College, he was ordained deacon by Bishop Helmuth (for the Bishop of Ripon) on 21 Decr 1883, as Curate of Ainderby Steeple. A little later he went out to the Colonial Mission field, where he was ordained priest on 29 Septr 1887 by the Bishop of Newfoundland, as Rector of Little Bay. Here he went through many hardships in the charge of his large parish, extending for more than one hundred miles along the coast of Labrador. He also acted as Inspector of Elementary schools there. After some while in Newfoundland he returned to England, only to find that his throat was too seriously affected to allow of his returning to the Colony.

He thereupon took up work at various continental chaplaincies, but owing to the same throat trouble it was thought wiser for him to give up clerical work altogether, so with characteristic energy he turned his thoughts to medicine and commenced his studies at Bonn, afterwards passing to Lille under Professors Folet, Debierre and Moniez. He afterwards went to Paris, where he attended for two years the marvellous lectures of that celebrated surgeon Paul Reclus, from whom he received much kindness. His first lessons in clinical medicine were given him by Professor Jaccoud and Dr Achard, and in obstetrics by Doctor Maygrier. In the course of his studies at Paris he received much help, kindness and advice from Doctors Brissaud, Ricard, Lejars, Beunier and Chavane. He took his degree as M.D. in the University of Paris on 25 May 1895, his thesis being "Du Prognostic opératoire des Fibromes des Parois abdominales."

REV. HARWARD TURNER, M.D.

Soon after this, on the invitation of a French medical friend, he left Paris to travel in Russia, with the intention of introducing certain special uses of cocaine there, in fact, he used laughingly to call himself "the Apostle of Cocaine." He was in Moscow at the Coronation of the present Czar, and it was there that he met the son of a Kirghiz Chief who persuaded him to go back with him to see his father, the Sultan of one of the largest Kirghiz tribes, who was suffering from a painful illness. After a long and adventurous journey over the steppes of Tartary, they arrived at the settlement on the borders of Northern China. Here Dr. Turner lived for some five months, seeing many strange things and enjoying, to some extent, the wildness of the life. He was able to relieve the old Sultan's great suffering, although he knew from the first that there was no cure for him. As the old man drew near his end he refused to allow Dr Turner to leave him, and he died in his presence, to the great anger of the Chief men and the Mollahs or priests, who were annoyed that an English stranger and a Christian should have witnessed their Chief's end. Indeed the widow and the son gave orders that Dr Turner was to be confined to his tent, during the period of mourning; but eventually, on the night of the funeral, he was sent safely out of the country in an ox waggon; the Sultan's widow presenting him with some dried horse flesh as food for the journey and also a very dirty quilted coverlet, which she had worked with her own hands. Dr Turner arrived safely again in Russia after many weeks of tedious travelling.

Here he remained some little while until about the year 1899, when he was employed by the Russian Government to take charge of a medical expedition they were sending to the famine-stricken districts of Siberia. For months he worked among these poor people, sick with famine and consequent scurvy, his assistants being all Russians or Tartars and speaking no English or French. It is thought that his hard work here seriously injured his health and perhaps hastened his end.

For some years Dr Turner had spent the summer at La Bourboule in France—a "spa" he had great faith in, especially for the cure of skin diseases of all kinds. He held that the Baths and waters there were of great curative power in scurvy and other maladies of like nature. In the autumn of 1905 Dr Turner decided to leave Kazan, where he had a house—his manservant advising him that it was no longer safe to remain there—such indeed proved to be the case, as the week after he left, his house was sacked and burnt—he certainly only got away just in time, for the train by which he left was the last to get through to Moscow, and the same was the case for Warsaw.

Dr Turner now settled in a flat at Paris with the intention of resuming his medical work there. In January of the present year, however, he came over to England for a few days to see friends and attend to sundry private matters; he returned to Paris on the 18th or 19th of that month, and it was therefore with the utmost astonishment that his family heard of his sudden, one may almost say mysterious, death there on 23rd of the same month. His death was attributed to heart failure, but the real cause will never be known, as the messages sent to his relations were unfortunately delayed in transit, and they were only able to arrive in Paris in time for his funeral, when it was too late for further enquiries. Dr Turner had never been really strong since his sojourn in Siberia, he having suffered a good deal from Siberian fever, and when he was in Yarmouth a week before his death, he seemed to have lost some of his energy and cheerfulness.

Dr Turner was a remarkable linguist, and seemed to find no difficulty in acquiring the languages of the various countries he visited: he contributed an article (August 1900) to "Les Archives Générales de Medecine" entitled "Le Scorbut, est-il une maladie infectieuse et contagieuse?" and in "Le Courrier Médical," Novr 1900, an article on "L'enseignement Médical en Russie." In 1886-88 he contributed to the "Weston Mercury" some articles, "Letters from Newfoundland" and "Newfoundland Sketches." In the "Humanitarian" for July 1900 appeared "A Kirghiz Home in Siberia" from his pen. Dr Turner was a member of the Orpheus Lodge of Freemasons of London, of the Royal Statistical Society and of the Royal Microscopical Society, and also an Honorary Member of Trinity College, London.

He was buried in the Bagneux Cemetery at Paris, where a neat stone, inscribed with his name, marks the resting-place of one who was, as the inscription truly says, "deeply regretted by all who knew him."

Of Dr Turner's genial nature, of his many kind acts, and of his liberality, much might be said. It is enough to say here, however, that if it had not been for his generosity and forethought, this edition of his book could not have been produced in the way that the writer has endeavoured to do it. Would it were a worthier memorial of him.

JOHN GOATE FISHER, Esq.

1778—1861.

"Ipswich Journal," April 22nd, 1820.

Married, on Wednesday last, in this town (Yarmouth), John Goate Fisher, Esq., of this place, to Charlotte, youngest daughter of the Rev. Richard Turner, Minister of Yarmouth.

"New Monthly Magazine," Oct., 1820.

John Goate Fisher, Esq., is elected Mayor of Yarmouth for the year ensuing.

John Goate Fisher.—He was the eldest surviving son of John Fisher Esq^re^ by Martha his wife, the daughter and heiress of John Goate Esq^re^ who died 4 July 1793, and was buried in Sherringham chancel. As a young man Mr. J. G. Fisher held a Captain's Commission in the 3^rd^ Norfolk Militia; but, having qualified for the law, he subsequently practised as a Solicitor in Great Yarmouth, in partnership with George Lucas and Thomas Fowler Steward. In 1793 his maternal grandfather devised him an estate of 500 acres at Bodham; and upon the death of his father in 1835 he inherited 132 acres at Ormesby—which was all that remained (Feet of Fines Norfolk, Easter 10 Geo. III.) of a much larger property that his ancestors had acquired in 1716 (Hemsby Manor Records 13 Jan^y^ 1716, 18 Nov. 1718), including Scratby Hall (Palmer's Perlustrations, I. p. 371). On his marriage with Charlotte Turner Mr. J. G. Fisher resided in a house at Southtown, which once occupied the present site of the Station, but in 1835 they removed to his father's old residence at 28, North Quay. The portrait of his wife is taken from a water-colour drawing in the possession of her granddaughter, Mrs. Binning of Rossett Hall. She and her sister Mrs. Hoste were much admired, the latter for her beautiful complexion, and were known to their friends as "Face and Figure." In common with his brother-in-law Sir George Turner, Mr. J. G. Fisher suffered a heavy loss through the defalcations of a co-trustee, and this compelled him to sell the Bodham estate. He was a Justice of the Peace from 1820 to 1835. He died 1 Nov. 1861, and was buried with his wife at Ormesby, when his lands in that place were sold by his executors.

Probate P. C. C. 13 Jan^{y} 1862. (Compare Perlustrations of Great Yarmouth; Navy Records Society, Vol II. p. 104; Dic. Nat. Biog. LVII. pp. 22-3; The Rhyme of the Sun Lorenzo, p. 53; etc.).

The Rev. John Turner Fisher.—He was the eldest son of J. G. Fisher and Charlotte his wife, and was educated at the Charterhouse and at University College, Oxon., where he graduated B.A. in Nov. 1844. In 1847 he was admitted to holy orders; and, having married Sarah Mary, the daughter and heiress of Robert Abraham jr. of Ashburton (S^{t} James Chronicle Feb. 1851), he was presented to the Vicarage of Hessenford, near S^{t} Germain's in Cornwall. He expended a very considerable sum in the erection of a chapel-at-ease in Downderry. He died S.P. on 3rd Dec. 1885, and was buried at Hessenford. Probate P.C.C. 1886. His widow died 5th May 1896. Probate P.C.C. 1896.

William Richard Fisher.—He was the second son of J. G. Fisher and Charlotte his wife, and was educated at the Charterhouse. Having read law with his uncle Francis Turner he was called to the Bar on 13 June 1851, and became a member of Lincoln's Inn. He was the author of "Fisher on Mortgages," and also of "A History of the Forest of Essex," concerning which great tract of country an important lawsuit took place, wherein he was junior counsel for the City, under the leadership of Lord James of Hereford. He built the house called FISHERS in Harrow, whereon the initials W.R. & A.F. may be seen, as also his arms in stained glass, which he likewise placed in the Toll House at Great Yarmouth. He died 17 Nov^{r} 1888, and was buried in the cemetery at Guildford. Probate P.C.C. 1889. By his marriage with Amelia Mary, the daughter of Richard Woodhouse of London (whose wife Harriet Sarah was the daughter

Charles Francis Fisher.—He was the youngest son of J. G. Fisher and Charlotte his wife, and was educated at St Olaves Priory School. Having read law with his uncle Francis Turner he qualified as a Solicitor, and the latter procured him a clerkship in the Audit Department. Having resigned through ill-health he practised in Ventnor, where he acted as Conservative Agent. When still quite a young man he incurred heavy losses through the insolvency of a Q.C. He died seven years later, when in his 41st year, and was buried in Ventnor Cemetery. By his marriage with Frances Elizabeth, the daughter of the Rev. T. F. Baker, the late Mr. C. F. Fisher left issue three sons and one daughter, of whom :

(a). Frank Owen Fisher was born at Ventnor 21 May 1860, and educated at All Saints' Bloxam, under the Rev. P. R. Egerton. In 1873 his grand-uncle Sir Charles Robert Turner obtained for him, from the Rt. Hon. J. G. Goschen, who was then First Lord of the Admiralty, a nomination for the Navy, which was given as an acknowledgment of the services of his grand-uncle Rear Admiral William Fisher (Dic. Nat. Biog. XIX. p. 75). By reason of the sudden decease of his father he abandoned this career ; and in 1878 he was nominated a Cadet in the Surveyor General's Department of New Zealand, where, on 3 May 1881, he qualified by examination as an Authorized Surveyor. He is now of St Leonards-on-Sea.

(b). Charles Paston Fisher was born at Ventnor 31 Dec. 1864, and educated at Haileybury College, and the School of Forestry at Nancy. In 1886 he was nominated an Assistant-Conservator in the Indian Government Department of Woods and Forests, where he is now a Conservator.

FRANCIS TURNER:

A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

(By the late Edward Russell James Howe, Esq.: his pupil and Son-in-law).

Francis Turner was born on the 20th of January, 1785, and was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in Michaelmas Term, 1810. From that time to his death in December, 1864, he practised as a Conveyancer. He was elected a Bencher of his Inn in 1848, and ten years later served the office of Treasurer. His family had been settled for several centuries at Mulbarton in Norfolk, where they owned the Manor and considerable property. Through his mother, Elizabeth Rede, he was lineally descended from William Paston, an eminent judge of the Common Pleas in the reign of Henry VI. and from Chief Justice Coke, so that as Palmer, the historian of Great Yarmouth, remarks of his younger brother, Sir George Turner, he had good legal blood in his veins.

Mr. Turner was the second son of the Rev. Richard Turner, Vicar or Perpetual Curate of Great Yarmouth, who in accordance with the custom of the period held at the same time several other benefices in his native County of Norfolk. Mr. Turner was originally intended for a solicitor and commenced his legal education in the office of his mother's brother, a solicitor practising at Beccles; but having shown very marked ability his father determined to send him to the Bar, and he became a pupil in the chambers of Richard Preston, then in the height of his distinction as a legal writer and real property lawyer. Mr. Preston soon discovered his pupil's talents and always spoke in high terms of his attainments and capacity. When he retired from practice many years later he offered his chambers in Lincoln's Inn to Mr. Turner, who continued to occupy them till his death.

Owing perhaps to the opinion of him expressed by Mr. Preston, and probably still more to the possession of a considerable East Country connexion, Mr. Turner very early acquired an extensive practice. He became specially known as a copyhold lawyer, and the reputation he enjoyed in this respect brought him a great many cases. The position he held as Steward of the Manors of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, who were the owners of a large number of Manors in the Eastern Counties, might have induced him to devote special attention to this branch of legal learning. The office which he was always compelled to serve by deputy had shortly after his call to the Bar been conferred upon him by his uncle, Dr. Richard Turner, who after being senior wrangler and tutor to Pitt at Cambridge, became Master of Pembroke College in that University and was appointed by the statesman Dean of Norwich.

Pupils as well as clients soon found their way to Mr. Turner's chambers, and probably very few Conveyancers have had a larger number of the former. For many years twelve was the limit to which he was understood to confine himself, though this was not unfrequently exceeded. Many of his pupils, and amongst them his younger brother George, who became Vice-Chancellor and Lord Justice, and Lord Justice Baggalay, were eminent in both branches of the profession. But amongst all the men he had assisted in training, Mr. Turner always considered Edward Jacob, also a senior wrangler, and in his day one of the best known of equity lawyers, as the most distinguished and regarded his early death as a loss to be greatly regretted.

The opinions given by Mr. Turner were remarkable for clearness and decision, and when tested by an appeal to the Courts were generally upheld. As a draftsman, the documents he settled were models of arrangement and clearness, and accuracy of expression. He considered no pains or labour too great to render his work perfect.

At one time of his life Mr. Turner had a considerable share of Government work. In conjunction with the late Mr. John Tidd Pratt he settled the new Poor Law Act, 4 and 5 William IV., cap. 76. At a later period, during the early days of the construction of the Railways, he acted as Conveyancing Counsel of the Great Western and several other Companies, and this connexion brought him a large amount of practice.

It may be added that in politics Mr. Turner was a Tory of the school of Lord Eldon, and opposed to change. He was, however, too practical and enlightened not to appreciate the alterations in the Law of real property which occurred in the later part of his life, and certainly would not have contended that a recovery was preferable to a disentailing assurance under the statute, or that the assignment of satisfied terms was a practice that ought to have been maintained. But at the same time he thought that the old system was more defensible than is generally supposed, and that the advantages of many of the changes introduced after the passing of the Reform Bill have been exaggerated. The fact that most of these changes were promoted and carried by a Whig Government did not predispose him in their favour. But, notwithstanding his strong political feeling, he was one of the most genial and kind-hearted of men, and generally liked and esteemed by his professional brethren. Amongst the Conveyancers of his day his most intimate friends were Peter Erle, the first Chief of the Charity Commission, Walter Coulson, for many years Parliamentary Counsel to the Home Office, Henry Egerton, William Twopenny, Richard Coote, one of the first Conveyancers to the Court and the author of the well-known work on the Law of Mortgage, and Samuel Turner of Gray's Inn.

Mr. Turner married Jane Sayers, the daughter of Mr. James Sayers, a Norfolk solicitor of good standing, and had a numerous family and afforded another instance of the truth of his ancestor Sir Edward Coke's quaint remark "that it is observed for a special blessing of Almighty God that few or none of that (the legal profession) die intestatus et imbroles—without will and without child."

"The Jurist," Dec. 24th, 1864.

The death of Francis Turner, Esq., of 7, New Square, Lincoln's Inn, and of Queen's Square, Westminster, requires more than an ordinary notice, in justice to his character and merits, and in satisfaction of the respect and regret of his numerous friends, and of the legal profession. In the somewhat secluded and modest department of conveyancing, Mr. Turner had long been eminent for the learning, diligence, and ability which that always critical, and often abstruse and profound science exacts. He had in youth been the favourite pupil of Preston, who, struck with his talents and acquirements remarked, "They have sent me a pupil who knows as much as myself," and Turner succeeded to his chambers. And in the course of a long practice, exceeding half of the present century, he became the instructor of several hundred pupils in succession, among whom were the Lord Justice Turner and the late Mr. Jacob.

As a copyhold lawyer, Mr. Turner's reputation was peculiarly great; and in all questions of real property, his opinions were most trusted and esteemed. But he loved and cultivated the whole study of the law; he had well digested its principles; could readily recall its leading cases; and had the judgment and discernment to apply this learning to new circumstances and complications.

Mr. Turner was by no means the mere lawyer. He delighted in general literature, and devoted his leisure to the books by which the great spirits of the past communicate with the present. He was a member of the Camden, Percy, Shakespeare, Arundel, and several Archæological Societies. His manners were remarkably gentle, ingenuous, and pleasing. His disposition was ever kind and cheerful. His conversation animated and pregnant with humour and instruction. Learning and modesty combined with high integrity, good sense, and good taste marked him for a lawyer, a scholar, and a gentleman. The great organ of the Temple Church, on the Sunday following his death, pealed forth his requiem, the Dead March in Saul. The walls and pillars of that beautiful building vibrated their last sad tribute to his character and standing; but his memory will ever linger in the hearts of his friends, and a large circle of professional and social acquaintance give a blessing to his tomb.

FRANCIS TURNER.

"The Deaf and Dumb Magazine," July, 1877.

It is our painful duty to record the death of Francis Turner, one of the Trustees of the Charitable and Provident Society of the Deaf and Dumb. He died suddenly, in his 65th year, from heart disease, April 30th, 1877, in his studio in Fitzroy Street. He was the eldest son of the late Francis Turner of Lincoln's Inn, a Conveyancing Counsel of great eminence, and a Bencher of the Inner Temple. He was a nephew of the late Lord Justice Turner, and of Sir Charles Turner. He was deaf and dumb from his earliest infancy, and as he in boyhood displayed a taste for drawing, his parents decided that he should follow the profession of an artist, which he zealously pursued through life as a landscape painter. By his own relations he was most dearly beloved, and their sorrow for his death will be deep and lasting. The memory of his pure and guileless life will ever be a comfort to them. His intimate friends felt a strong regard and affection for him, his acquaintance liked and respected him. It would be difficult to find a man who died leaving so many to mourn his loss, and we venture to say, not one who entertained a feeling of enmity against him. He had been spending a day or two in Kent, with one of his sisters, and returned to London on the 30th April, and went to his studio. Mr. Frederick Clarke, also deaf and dumb, an old friend of 45 years standing (they were fellow students at the Royal Academy), called to see him in the afternoon, and on opening the door of the studio found him lying dead on the floor. He used every effort to recover consciousness, but in vain. He summoned attendance and sent for a doctor, who pronounced life extinct. It was indeed a great shock to him to find his friend in such a condition. An inquest was held the following Wednesday, when Mr. Clarke gave witness, and we attended to interpret for him. May this prove another warning for us all to be ready, for we know not what a day may bring forth.

RICHARD EDWARD TURNER.

"The Law Times," Nov. 11th, 1882.

The late Richard Edward Turner, Esq., barrister-at-law, and bencher of the Inner Temple, who died on the 26th Oct. at his residence in St. George's Square, in the 69th year of his age, was the second son of Mr. Francis Turner, well known as an eminent conveyancer, and who for many years was a bencher of the Inner Temple, and filled in 1861 the office of Treasurer to that Society; nephew of the late Lord Justice Turner, and of the late Sir Charles Turner, formerly senior master of the Queen's Bench; and grandson of the Rev. Richard Turner, for thirty years Incumbent of Great Yarmouth. Mr. Turner was born in Guilford Street, Russell Square, in 1813, and was educated at Westminster and at Shrewsbury. He proceeded from the latter school to Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated as sixth in the first class of the Classical Tripos, and as a Senior Optime in 1836. He practised for some years as a special pleader, and in 1853 was called to the Bar as a member of the Inner Temple, and joined the Home Circuit. In 1874 Mr. Turner was appointed a revising barrister, and retained that appointment till his death. He was elected a bencher of the Inner Temple in Nov., 1879, having previously filled for some years the office of auditor. In 1880 he was appointed a member of the Sandwich Election Commission. We shall give the best idea of his legal attainments, and of the opinion entertained of him in the Profession, when we remind our readers that he had for many years past frequently sat as arbitrator. The repeated selection of him to discharge the responsible duties of such a post by members of the Bar—by those who knew him best as a lawyer—testifies conclusively to the opinion which they entertained of the soundness of his judgment, his strict integrity, and his knowledge of the law. The esteem in which members of the Bench and of the Bar held his private character is best evidenced by the fact that, when the Barristers' Benevolent Institution (of whose committee he had been a member from its commencement) were anxious to administer charity with such delicacy as not to wound the most sensitive susceptibility, his aid was often resorted to, as had been the case with associations formed from time to time for special purposes, before the existence of the Institution. Mr. Turner married in 1839 Frances, widow of the late Mr. James Turner, by whom he leaves seven children.

SAYERS TURNER.

"The Essex Standard," Feb. 14th, 1880.

The late Sayers Turner.—The remains of the late Mr. Sayers Turner, a brief memoir of whom will be found in another column, took place at the Cemetery on Thursday afternoon, amid unusual demonstrations of respect and esteem. The business establishments throughout the town were partially closed, and large numbers of residents and others attended at the grave. The body left the deceased's late residence, East Hill, at 2.30, in a hearse drawn by four horses, and the immediate relatives and personal friends followed in six coaches as under:—

1st Coach—Mr. G. Beresford Turner and Mr. C. Turner, sons; and Mr. R. E. Turner and Mr. F. Turner, brothers.

2nd Coach—Capt. Bowen, son-in-law; Mr. Howe, Mr. C. H. Hawkins, Rev. John Papillon and Mr. Alfred Williams.

3rd Coach—Mr. H. Egerton Green, Mr. Horace G. Egerton Green, Mr. Round, M.P., and Mr. Edmund Round.

4th Coach—Colonel Learmouth, M.P., Major J. F. Bishop, Rev. N. P. Gepp, and Mr. E. Waylen.

5th Coach—Mr. R. S. Nunn, Mr. R. F. Symmons, Mr. H. G. Deane, and Mr. H. H. Elwes.

6th Coach—Mr. W. Sowman and Mr. G. Taylor.

On arrival at the cemetery, the cortège was met by the Mayor, and most of the members of the Corporation; most of the solicitors practising in the Borough; Borough officials; representatives from various estates of which the deceased was Steward; local traders, &c., the procession as it passed up to the Church presenting a very imposing spectacle. The Rectory of All Saints being at this time vacant, the Burial Office was performed by the Rev. N. P. Gepp, Rector of the adjoining parish of St. James' and son of an old professional friend of the deceased. The coffin, which was of solid oak, with massive brass ornaments, had a brass plate, with the simple inscription in an Oxford border:—

Sayers Turner
Born Sept.r 18.th 1815
Died Feb.y 8.th 1880.

A handsome wreath and cross of flowers was upon the violet pall as the body was carried to the grave; and several loving hands cast flowers in the grave after the mourners had left. At a meeting of the Committee of the Colchester First Ward Conservative Association, held on Thursday evening, Mr. Thomas Docwra in the Chair, the following resolution was unanimously passed:—

"The Committee of the Colchester First Ward Conservative Association have heard with deep regret of the death of Mr. Sayers Turner, who for many years took a warm interest in the welfare of the Borough, and was a staunch supporter of the Conservative cause; and they desire respectfully to convey to the widow and family an expression of sincere sympathy with them in the irreparable loss they have sustained."

"The Essex Standard," Feb. 14th, 1880.

The Late Sayers Turner, Esq.

The death of Mr. Sayers Turner, which occurred on Monday morning last at his residence on East Hill, Colchester, has caused very general regret in the community amongst whom he lived for so many years, and with the public interests of which he has been so prominently identified. He had been for a considerable period in a failing physical condition, which necessitated his withdrawal from an active occupation, and his death had been for some time anticipated, so that the announcement of it created no surprise, although, as we have said, it did cause universal regret.

The deceased gentleman was born on the 18th of September, 1815, at Hopton, in Suffolk. He was descended from an old and highly respectable Norfolk family, one of his ancestors having purchased a property at Mulbarton, near Norwich, from Sir Thomas Gresham, in the latter part of the sixteenth century. His father, Mr. Francis Turner, was a well-known conveyancing barrister, and was Bencher and Treasurer of the Inner Temple. One of his uncles was Lord Justice Sir George Turner, and another Sir Charles Turner was senior master of the Queen's Bench. Having qualified as a Solicitor in London, Mr. Turner came, while quite a young man, to Colchester in 1837, where it may be said he spent his entire professional life.

He was married to Miss Williams, daughter of the Rev. James Haddy Williams, Rector of the two parishes of Fornham All Saints and Westley, near Bury St. Edmund's, who with six children—two sons and four daughters—survives him.

On commencing his residence in Colchester he entered into partnership with Mr. William Sparling, at that time Town Clerk of the Borough, and Mr. H. G. Deane subsequently joined the firm, the style of which is now Turner, Deane, Elwes and Turner. After some years Mr. Sparling retiring from Colchester, Mr. Turner acceded to the Town Clerkship thus vacated, and occupied that position for a period of about twenty-eight years. In 1877 he was warned by the decline of his strength, of the necessity of lightening his labour, and resigned the office, the duties of which he had discharged with such honour and efficiency as to secure the universal confidence and respect of the community. His retirement was made the occasion of the presentation to him of a handsome testimonial, expressive of the personal esteem in which he was held by all classes in the Borough, and of the appreciation with which his public services as Town Clerk had been regarded. Almost immediately on his resignation of that office, a vacancy having occurred among the Aldermen, Mr. Turner was chosen to fill it, and so at the time of his death he occupied a seat in the municipal body of which he had been for so many years the Chief Official.

NOTE.—The remainder of this article, which is very long, is omitted, as it adds no further information to the above, and refers only to the professional life of Mr. Sayers Turner.

REV. CHARLES EDGAR TURNER

(Vicar of Egg Buckland).

He was born 19 April, 1826, at Queen's Square, Westminster, and received his early education in a school at Blackheath, from whence he went to Shrewsbury. A few years later he entered at St. John's College, Cambridge, which he left soon after for Magdalen, where he took his B.A. degree in 1849.

In 1850 he was ordained deacon, and priest in the following year, and became curate at Daisy Hill, near Bradford, under Dr. Slade. Soon after he was presented to the Rectory of All Saints, Little Bolton, where his work among the dense manufacturing population is still gratefully remembered. Here he remained for nine years, when he removed to Egg Buckland, of which parish he was vicar for forty years and where he died on 8th Feb: 1901.

Mr. Turner was twice married, his first wife being Theophila, daughter of the Rev. James Hoste, whom he married in 1852, and his second wife a daughter of Mr. James Wolferstan.

RICHARD BLOXAM.

Mr. Richard Bloxam was born in 1803 at Newport in the Isle of Wight, and served his articles with Mr. Chas. Dawson, of the firm of Exley, Stocker and Dawson. He was admitted a Solicitor in 1830, and on Mr. Dawson's retirement from the firm of Dawson and Hawkins he succeeded him and continued a member of that firm for more than twenty years.

Mr. Bloxam during the whole of his professional life took considerable interest in Chancery practice, and was instrumental in the introduction of many reforms. One of these reforms was that in place of the Masters in Chancery, each Chancery Judge had two chief and some junior clerks appointed to assist him. These chief clerks had to be either Master's clerks or Solicitors of at least ten years standing. Mr. Bloxam was the first chief clerk appointed from the ranks of the Solicitors. He had also been chief clerk to Sir George James Turner, then Vice-Chancellor, and upon Sir George's promotion to be Lord Justice, he became chief clerk to Sir W. Page Wood, afterwards Lord Hatherley.

In 1845 Mr. Bloxam married a daughter of Mr. Francis Turner, the well-known conveyancer, and in 1859 he was appointed a taxing master in the Court of Chancery. He died at his residence, Eltham Court, Kent, on Feb. 23, 1896, leaving a widow, two sons and four daughters.

EDWARD RUSSELL JAMES HOWE

(Barrister-at-Law).

Mr. Edward Russell James Howe, barrister, of Chart-place, Maidstone, who died on the 17th June, 1899, at his residence at Bexley, in Kent, was not only one of the oldest of the conveyancing counsel of the time, but also one who enjoyed a very high reputation among them. He had a quasi-hereditary title to the peculiar learning and skill which constitute the equipment of a practitioner in that department of the profession. His chambers at 7, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, are those in which Mr. Preston conducted his great practice, and probably produced his text-books, to which real property lawyers refer with confidence for what was law in the old time before that of our fathers. Mr. Preston, on his retirement, offered his chambers to his former pupil, the late Mr. Francis Turner, who—being himself one of the most eminent conveyancers of his day—occupied them till his death in the year 1864. Mr. Howe, who had been Turner's pupil and became his son in-law, became also on Mr. Turner's death the occupant of the same chambers, and practised there during the rest of his life.

Probably Mr. Howe's most public work was the part he took in the year 1859 as junior counsel in the case of Earl of Shrewsbury v. Scott, wherein, conformably to Mr. Howe's opinion, the title of Earl Talbot to Alton Towers on his succession to the Earldom of Shrewsbury was affirmed. Mr. Howe was the elder son of the late Mr. Edward Russell James Howe, of Chart Sutton, near Maidstone, by Anna Maria, his wife, daughter of the Rev. James Edward Gambier, rector of St. Mary-le-Strand and Langley, Kent. He was born at Hollingbourne on the 29th of April, 1823; was educated at Sutton Valence Grammar School and St. John's College, Cambridge, where he graduated M.A. in 1849. In Michaelmas Term of the same year, having become a student of Lincoln's-inn in 1846, he was called to the bar at that inn.

He had been, as already mentioned, a pupil in the chambers of Mr. Francis Turner, whose third daughter, Harriet, he married in 1853. They had four children, Mr. Henry Gambier Howe, of 101, Leadenhall-street, and Bexley, Kent, solicitor. Mr. Edward R. J. Gambier-Howe, F.S.A., who in 1880 was called to the bar at Lincoln's-inn, and afterwards, having gone to Queensland as associate to the late Mr. Justice Harding, was also called to the bar there. He, however, soon returned to London, and has chambers at 7, New-square. Mr. Howe's third son, Francis Herbert Howe, is a Captain and Brevet-Major in the Welsh Regiment, and was employed in the N.W. Frontier (India) operations 1897-8, and in the S. African War 1899-1902, and was twice mentioned in despatches. The fourth child of Mr. Howe was a daughter, who, to his great grief, died in childhood. Mrs. Howe died in 1892.

In manner Mr. Howe was most gentle and refined. His generosity appeared in the last communication the writer had from him, which was a letter desiring that his testimony to the kindness of two former very eminent members of his own branch of the legal profession might be recorded. Probably he exemplified a remark he once playfully made, that it was a prime virtue of conveyancers to be retiring.

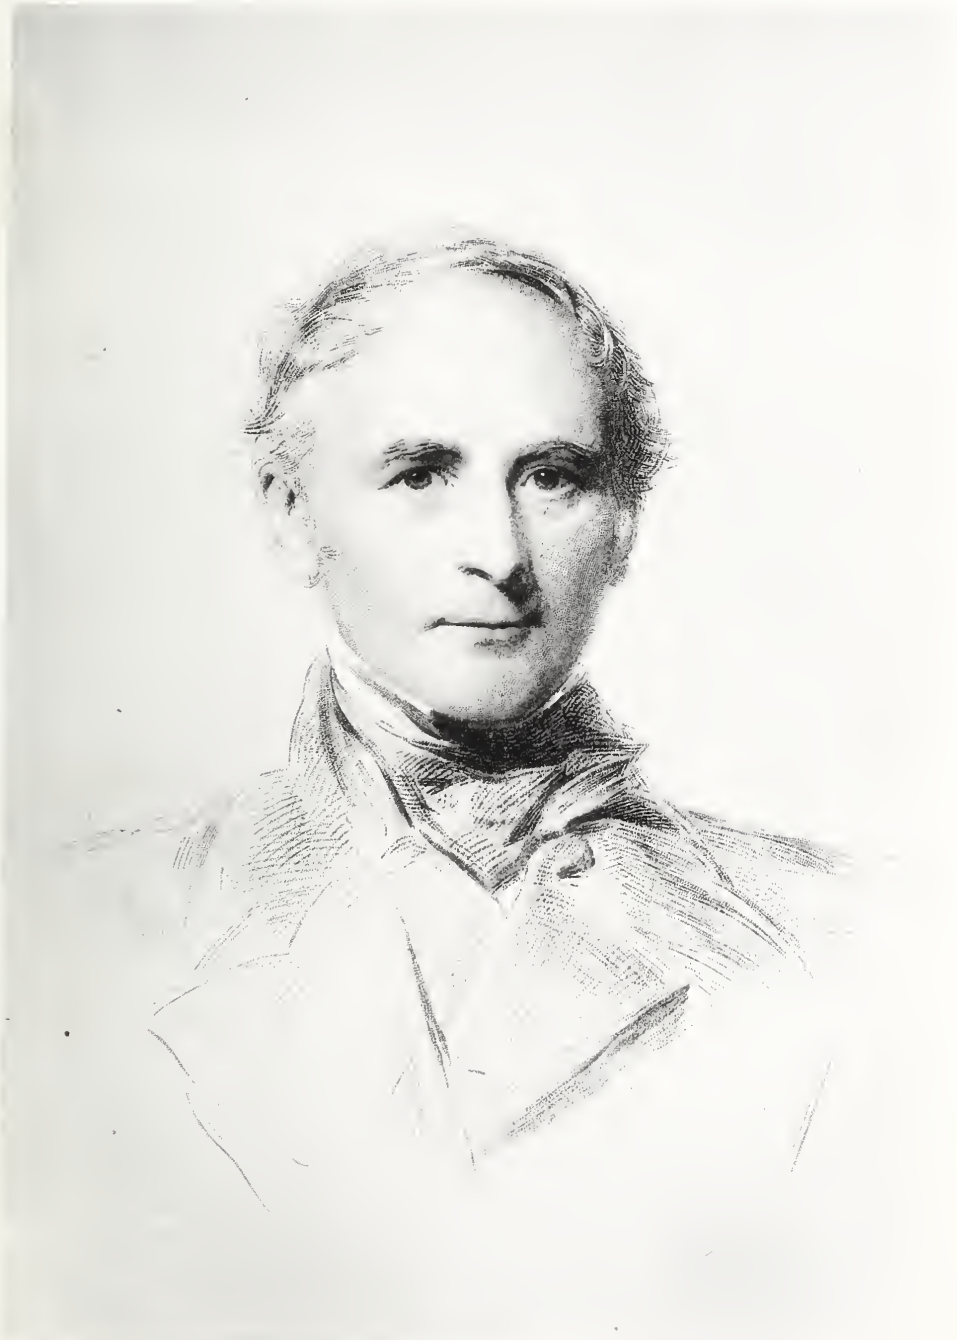
LORD JUSTICE TURNER.

The Right Hon. Sir George James Turner, P.C., D.C.L., Lord Justice of Appeal in Chancery, a very able and highly distinguished equity lawyer and judge, who died on the 9th inst., at his house, 23, Park Crescent, Regent's Park, was a son of the Rev. Richard Turner, B.D., of Great Yarmouth, and was born Feb. 5th, 1798.

He was educated at the Charterhouse and at Pembroke College, Cambridge, where he graduated B.A., as ninth wrangler, in 1819, M.A. in 1822, and D.C.L. He was sometime Fellow of his college. He was called to the Bar by the Hon. Society of Lincoln's Inn, in 1821, and was made a Q.C. in 1840.

He was, in 1847, elected M.P. for Coventry, which borough he represented until January, 1851, when he was appointed a Vice-Chancellor. This office he retained until January, 1853, when he became Lord Justice of Appeal in Chancery. He was knighted in 1851, was sworn in a Privy Councillor, and at the time of his death was a Governor of the Charterhouse and a Fellow of the Royal Society. Sir George married in 1823, Louisa, youngest daughter of Edward Jones, Esq., of Brackley, by whom he had six sons and three daughters.



SIR GEORGE JAMES TURNER, KNT.

The profession and the public will readily confirm the opinion expressed the other night in Parliament of the deceased Judge, by his eminent coadjutor, Lord Cairns. His Lordship said, "Lord Justice Turner was as wise and upright a Judge, and as efficient and conscientious a public servant, as ever sat upon the bench."

"Gentleman's Magazine," Aug., 1867.

The Right Honourable Sir George James Turner, senior, Lord Justice of the Court of Appeal in Chancery, M.A., F.R.S., D.C.L. On the mother's side Sir George Turner descended from Sir Robert Naunton, Secretary of State to James I., and author of "Fragmenta Regalia," and from his wife, Mary, granddaughter of Sir Edward Coke, Lord Chief Justice of England, through whose wife, Bridget, the daughter of John Paston, Esq., Sir George Turner was also descended from the ancient Norfolk family of that name, and from William Paston, Judge of the Common Pleas temp. Henry VI.

Sir George was educated at the Charterhouse. He graduated B.A. at Pembroke College, Cambridge, in 1819, being ninth wrangler, and was afterwards elected a Fellow, proceeded M.A. in 1822. Dr. Joseph Turner, his uncle, Dean of Norwich, and formerly Tutor of William Pitt, was then the Master of Pembroke College. His name having been entered at Lincoln's Inn, he became a pupil of the late Lord Cottenham, and in July, 1821, he was called to the Bar. Shortly afterwards he edited a volume of Chancery Reports in conjunction with the late James Russell, Esq., Q.C. In May, 1840, he became Q.C. simultaneously with Mr. Bethell, now Lord Westbury, who was two years his junior. In 1847 he was elected M.P. for Coventry, defeating the former member, Mr. William Williams; he continued to represent that borough, as a Liberal Conservative, until April, 1851, when he was appointed Vice-Chancellor, and received the honour of knighthood; this office he retained until January, 1853, when he became Lord Justice of Appeal in Chancery.

As a member of the House of Commons, Sir George Turner introduced and carried the measure known as George Turner's Act, which, with other minor improvements upon the cumbersome practice of that day, enabled the Court of Chancery to decide upon a special case, questions in which the parties were agreed upon the facts.

To him, in a great degree, as a member of the Chancery Commission, are due many of the great improvements in the practice of the Court, which were effected in 1852, and he may be said to have been the "Father of the Present Chamber Practice in Chancery."

The late Lord Justice was sworn a member of the Privy Council in 1851, and, at the time of his death, was a Governor of the Charterhouse. His reputation as a most able and profound lawyer was universally recognised by the profession. Besides his official merits he bore personally the character of a most amiable, upright, and conscientious man, as may be gathered from the following observation of the Lord Chancellor: "I am sure the Bar will deeply regret the loss which the public and the profession have sustained in the death of that most excellent and upright man, Lord Justice Turner; the unvarying kindness and courtesy which he showed to his profession, his devoted application to every case that was brought before him, the anxious care with which he worked out all his judgments, and which were always full and satisfactory, can never be forgotten, and I am quite sure that there is hardly anyone connected with the Court of Chancery who will not feel he has lost almost a personal friend in this most amiable man, and upright and conscientious judge."

NOTE.—Sir G. J. Turner's mother was descended from William Naunton, brother of Sir Robert Naunton, and not from Sir Robert, as stated in the above article. The Robert Naunton who married Mary Coke, was the son of William, and nephew of Sir Robert Naunton, the Secretary of State (See Pedigree No. 12).

THE "TIMES," APRIL 17TH, 1872.

Death. On the 12th inst., at "The Moult," Kingsbridge, S. Devon, aged 76, Lady Turner, widow of the Rt. Hon. Sir Geo. James Turner, lately one of the Lord Justices of Appeal in Chancery.

NOTE.—Sir G. J. Turner's will was proved in London, August 6th, 1867. An abstract of it is given in the "Illustrated London News," August 24th, 1867.

THE RIGHT REV. JAMES FRANCIS TURNER

(Bishop of Grafton and Armidale).

James Francis Turner, who was the third son of the Right Hon. Sir George James Turner and Louisa his wife, was born 30th August 1827. He was educated at the Charterhouse, together with his cousins, the writer's uncles, at whose father's house in Yarmouth he spent many of his holidays. Writing on this subject his old school-fellow, Canon Blacker, says :

" Her (Miss Turner's) father was my greatest friend in the old days at Charterhouse. We were in the same House, and the same Form in the School. How I wish I had known he was in Rome some week or so before I heard that the Master had called for him."

Upon leaving school young Turner was entered by his father at Durham University, where in 1851 he took his B.A. degree (4th Class Honors), proceeding M.A. some three years later, ere which he was articled as a pupil to the late Sir Gilbert Scott, serving for some time under that distinguished architect. Having taken orders he was in 1858 presented to the Rectory of North Tidworth, which living was in the gift of his father's former colleague, the Chancellor of England. In 1859 he was married at Rochester to Miss Mary Sorsbie, whose brother Robert held the Vicarage of Clare in Suffolk, and was afterwards the Bishop's Commissary. Having resigned the living of North Tidworth, where his theology brought him into conflict with a section of his parishioners, he accepted the Bishopric of Grafton and Armidale, which in 1865 had been erected out of the northern portion of the See of Newcastle, N.S.W. Its partition was effected by the then Bishop of Newcastle, with the financial assistance of a former resident of Grafton, who seriously crippled his resources in so doing, and died shortly afterwards. Arriving in 1869, Bishop Turner, after due induction, set himself to work with determination, and by the devoted assistance of a number of friends was enabled to complete the erection of the cathedral at Grafton. This handsome building, which is constructed entirely of red brick in the Early English style of architecture, he himself designed as, from his previous training, he was well qualified to do. He did not, however, reside at Grafton, as he found the summer heat of that place too trying, but dwelt at Bishopsthorpe near Armidale, amid the delightful New England tablelands.

(LATE BISHOP OF GRAFTON AND ARMIDALE).

With a diocese as large as Scotland, and no railway then available, Bishop Turner found ample occupation for his talents. He was a man of handsome presence, blue eyed, fair haired, high complexioned and portly, much "given to hospitality," and of a sunny genial disposition. If he had a failing it was the want of business knowledge that occasionally led him to repose too much confidence in advisers whose mismanagement subsequently brought a loss upon the diocese. But against his clergy no such reproach can be levelled, for he surrounded himself with a staunch band of followers, whose ministrations throughout that large tract of country he supervised with energy, making long journeys through unsettled districts, and often sleeping in the open; his tent—which he designated The Palace—being, as often as not, his lodging. A keen theologian, as his correspondence in the Church papers of the Province testifies, he was, nevertheless, so open-minded as to win the esteem of all parties; but in such matters he showed great shrewdness, as may be instanced in his refusal to appoint a Dean of Grafton. "For," said he, to the writer of this memoir, "a dean is omnipotent in his own cathedral, and there cannot be two Kings of Brentford."

Having no child he and Mrs. Turner adopted the little daughter of an old friend and neighbour, upon whom he, by episcopal licence, bestowed his name and arms. Upon the death of Mrs. Turner in 1879 this lady assumed the management of her foster-parent's household, and accompanied him to his new residence, called St. Cuthbert's after his patron of Durham. Here in the seclusion of his well-stocked library, which, lighted with its stained glass windows, seemed an oasis of tranquility, Bishop Turner found occasional rest and relief from his responsibilities, his daughter keeping open house for his clergy with no niggardly hand.

As a testimony of his kindliness the writer ventures to insert the following extract from one of his letters, many of which are still existing. Others there are, to disclose which would, perhaps, be a breach of good taste, but for genuine sweetness of character and genial goodness it would be hard to match the following :—

"Grafton, 23rd August, 1890.

"My Dear Frank,

"I received yours of the 18th inst just now, where you see by the heading. Let me congratulate you on your fatherhood, and I hope that you may live to see your boy a man, a double-first or Senior Wrangler and first Classic. Now don't you spoil him, exercise proper discipline and chastisement, have him baptized as soon as possible, in public if you are, as I trust you are, a good Churchman; when he exhibits the "old man" after Baptism, what our 9th Article calls phronema sarkos, let him know it, spank him a bit with the best of care, judiciously; you don't know yet what good it does; never mind what the missus says, to remit it when required is to spare medicine when needed.

"I do not expect to be at Armidale before December, possibly not before Christmas; we have to find new domestics among other troubles, probably Emmie told you how they dismissed us. We had spoilt them finely; of the "We" E.H.P-T especially; and from March to July we were almost entirely our own servants; Bishop was helper at washing-ups, knife and lamp cleaning, &c. positively only for working Emmie a little hard, it was rather jolly.

"You speak of your cousin W. Fisher.* I did not know him and truth to say I do not exactly understand how your cousin should be over 70 years of age. I saw the death of a William Fisher, and took it for granted that it was my cousin†—your uncle—of bird and bird's egg fame.

"Well, I hope that you will find all go well in Maori land, and when you go, see that you get me all kinds of curios for the Oxford Museum, that's a good boy. Kind cousinly regards to yourself and wife, in which Emmie would join if there were a telephone, but there ain't. Don't forget the spanking, you will thank me for the prescription, no fear.

"Your affectionate Cousin,

"Jas. F. Turner,

"Bp. of Gn & A., N.S.W.

"P.S. Do you write with your finger nail or a stick for a pen?"

The late Dr. Turner resigned his bishopric in 1892. On July 23rd he wrote announcing his return to Europe, and probable sojourn in Italy during the coming winter. Arriving at Naples early in 1893, in company with his adopted daughter, he continued his journey to Rome, where he went out in the cold evening air, and so contracted a chill. This was the beginning of the sickness to which he speedily succumbed, dying on the 27th April 1893. So unlooked for was his decease that his friends were actually expecting him in England upon that date, and the news therefore came as a shock and surprise to all of them. He lies buried in the English Cemetery at Rome, beneath a beautiful slab of marble, whereon is engraved the insignia of his sacred office.
